HIS WIFE WAS INFORMED

And Was Heart-Broken When Told of His Astonishing Duplicity.

HE ASKED THE GIRL TO ELOPE

To Pittsburg, But Her Mother, Suspicious, Investigated And Discovered That the Deceiver Had a Wife And Child in Zanesville.

One of the most sensational stories brought to light in the East End for many months was told this morning by Mrs. R. W. Lemmon, of Mulberry street.

The story Mrs. Lemmon told a reporter in her home this morning follows:

"Some months ago Wm. U. Betz came to the East End and began to do carpenter work on a new house then being built on First avenue. Within a short time we began to talk to him and it was nothing until he began to call at our house, and incidentally asked to 'keep company' with our daughter Daisy. We thought nothing of this, and Betz commenced to come around regularly. It was not long until he asked Daisy if she would reserve Wednesday and Sunday evenings for him, which request was readily granted. He boarded at the home of Mrs. Hamilton, on Ohio avenue and Mulberry street, and was looked upon by those who knew him as a model young man."

Betz never went anywhere with Miss Lemmon, and after he had been coming to the Lemmon home for several weeks he was asked if he was not a married man. This he denied. In some manner certain young men of the East End began to question him as to him being married and he intimated that he was married once, but was divorced, and that in settling the case he paid his wife $4,000. Still he continued to come to the Lemmon home, and only a few weeks ago he asked Miss Daisy to elope with him to Pittsburg, where they could marry and live together without being molested. He also told the young lady that if she was not satisfied with her surroundings there, she could take what furniture he would buy to furnish the room and return to her mother and father in the East End, telling them that she had been fooled. This suggestion was made by Betz so that Miss Lemmon would know what to do if she did not like life in Pittsburg. Mrs. Lemmon was immediately told of the proposition made by Betz, but Betz was not informed, as he asked the lady that she keep the matters as quiet as possible.

Then Mrs. Lemmon made inquiry of the postmasters at Zanesville and Ruraldale, in Muskingum county, his former home, and found that Betz had a wife and a 10-year-old daughter residing at 450 East Main street, Zanesville. Mrs. Lemmon wrote Mrs. Betz of the proposals made to her daughter and asked the woman if she was divorced. In reply a letter was received, which in part read:

"Your letter almost makes me frantic with grief, although I thank you for the information. Yes, Mrs. Lemmon, Mr. Betz lives with his wife and baby and is not divorced. Do you mean to say that he has been keeping company with your daughter since June last? I have been wanting to come to East Liverpool, but have been refused by him. I have been helping make a living by sewing. I have begged him to come home, but he has refused. I, Mrs. May Betz, am Wm. U. Betz's lawful and legal wife, and we have not been divorced. His daughter's name is Helen. If he doesn't know this, tell him. God be with you till we meet."

Matters were then arranged between Mrs. Lemmon and Mrs. Betz for the latter to visit the East End. Betz, however, heard of this in some manner and he left yesterday for Zanesville, telling Mrs. Hamilton, his boarding mistress, that he had secured a position as a traveling salesman for a Zanesville firm. Mrs. Lemmon also received a letter from the man's wife, which Betz wrote her a few days ago, in which he made especial inquiry as to the health of his child. This letter is now in the possession of Mrs. Lemmon, with two others which Mrs. Betz wrote. Mrs. Hamilton, it is said, has also received letters from Mrs. Betz, but believed Betz to be upright. It is now believed that as soon as Betz heard his wife and daughter were coming to the East End he went to Bellaire, where he proposes to intercept them and return to Zanesville.

In the last letter Mrs. Lemmon received Mrs. Betz said:

"I thank you for your invitation to come to the East End. Have your daughter pay no more attention to him. His mother makes her home with us now. He has also a heavy ring with my intials, E. M. B., inside, and I ask if he has given any presents to your daughter. Pardon me, but I beg of you for the sake of his poor white-haired mother and his only and heart-broken wife if you can end this trouble. Does Mrs. Hamilton know of this?"

Betz was employed as a carpenter by Contractor Harvey McHenry.

BOYS BADLY HURT WHILE COASTING

THEIR SLED CRASHED INTO A TELEPHONE POLE.

George Tatgenhorst And Carl Thompson Narrowly Escape Death. Others Injured.

A coasting accident which came near costing the lives of two boys occurred last evening on Lincoln avenue. Several lads, among them being George Tatgenhorst and Carl Thompson, were seated on a big road sled and were coming down the hill at high speed when the sled got beyond control of the steerer.

When at a point near the Standard pottery a collision with a telephone pole resulted and the youngsters were hurled into a heap. Young Tatgenhorst fell under the sled and had one of his legs fearfully mangled, though no bones were broken. The Thompson boy was also badly cut and bruised, and it is feared he is hurt internally.

Another accident occurred last evening, also on Lincoln avenue, in which a sled load of boys collided with Dr. W. A. Hobbs' buggy. Two boys named Webber and Jennings were severely, but not dangerously, hurt.

HURLED DEFIANCE AT THE OFFICERS

Armed With An Ax and Knife, Dave Wooley Goes On the Warpath.

And the Half-Crazed Man Threatened to Kill Everybody Who Tried to Interfere With Him—Finally Arrested And Jailed.

Armed with an ax and a huge butcher knife, Dave Wooley, who lives in a boat house near the flint mill, while crazed from the effects of liquor last night, terrorized the other members of the family by threatening to kill them and defied two officers until they went after him with their clubs and overpowered him.

One of the younger Wooley boys rushed excitedly into the city hall shortly after dark and informed Policemen Mahoney and Stafford that Dave was throwing trunks and furniture out of the boat and trying to kill those of the family who offered to interfere.

Hurriedly the officers made their way to the scene and on going into the boat found Dave behind some boxes raving like a mad man with the knife in one hand and the ax in the other. Blood covered his face and he looked like a murderous desperado. A command to halt from one of the officers brought an oath from the crazed man, who raised the ax high above his head and dared anyone to come near him. Again he was commanded to throw down his weapons, but he refused, once more threatening to commit murder if an attempt was made to arrest him.

Finding that force was necessary to subdue the desperate man the officers drew their clubs and started towards him. Mahoney went to one side and Stafford to the other and they were about to close in on their man when he weakened, dropped his weapons and threw up his hands. He

SENATE STRONGLY FOR IT

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, February 7.—The general assembly transacted a small amount of business Thursday. No bills were introduced nor acted upon that had any close bearing on Columbiana county. The Painter house bill, increasing the salaries of the judges of the supreme court from $5,000 to $6,000 per annum, was made a law under suspension of rules Thursday afternoon by the senate. The measure was rushed through in order to make it apply to Judge-elect Price, who takes his seat on the supreme bench next Monday, succeeding Judge Minshall, the acting chief justice.

Senator Connell supported the bill, only two votes being cast against it in the senate. It required a fight to secure its passage in the house. Messrs. Buell and Crist refused to support it for economic reasons and argued that they were actuated by a desire to do nothing which could be construed as being inconsistent with Governor Nash's policy of retrenchment. Senator Connell voted for the measure on the principle that the onerous and responsible duties of the position warranted an increase in the compensation. Senator Connell left for Pittsburg Thursday night. Messrs. Buell and Crist leave for home today.

Bills were introduced in the house today as follows: Authorizing Canton, Youngstown and Akron to issue bonds to cover floating debts; requesting the senators and representatives from Ohio in congress to vote for a constitutional amendment favoring the election of United States senators by a direct vote of the people; making it an offense punishable by life imprisonment to blow up or attempt to blow up safes or vaults; making it a penitentiary offense to steal automobiles; requiring full crews on passenger trains.

Deputy Examiner Elmer E. Miller, of Canton, has notified Chief Examiner Collier, of the state board of engineers, that he has been examining the engineers of Columbiana county this week. Yesterday he was scheduled to be in East Liverpool. Today and tomorrow he will be at Steubenville. He also filed his monthly report, which is as follows: Applications received, 47; applications rejected, 14; licenses issued, 33; licenses renewed, 151; receipts, $217; expenses, $96.30.

MANY SERIOUSLY HURT BY SLED OVERTURNING

A sled load of young people from this city while on the way to Fairview, W. Va., last night, met with a serious accident while about two miles beyond Chester. Barney Vale, a clerk at Ansley's drug store, in this city, who was among the excursionists, was hurt about the head and is suffering from a most unusual affliction.

While the sled was passing over a slanting spot in the road the rear end began to slide to the lower side and continued until a rut was reached when the vehicle came to an abrupt stop with sufficient force to throw over the bed. The occupants were all dumped out and nearly all were more or less bruised.

Vale tumbled headlong and struck against a telephone pole. His face and scalp were cut, but it was not thought until he reached home that his injuries were serious. This morning he arose from his bed and went to the store where he is employed. Mr. Ansley questioned the clerk concerning the accident, but the young man's mind was so dazed he could not recall a single detail concerning it.

Fearing serious developments Mr. Ansley induced the injured clerk to go to his room, where a physician was called. An examination developed that Vale's skull had been badly bruised, which so affected the brain that the memory had become a blank. He is yet unable to recall anything regarding the accident and quiet was ordered in the hope that rest will restore his memory.

John Brooks was severely cut over the eye by coming in contact with a sharp stone. It required three stitches to close the wound.

Daniel Southall, colored, who was driving the horses attached to the ill-fated sled fell heavily and had one of his arms thrown out of place. Others in the sled received cuts and bruises.

Miss Humrickhouse and Miss Wells, who were of the party, were also hurt.

HAD BIGGER GAME IN VIEW AND PLANNED BOLD ROBBERY

Biddle Brothers Sold Clothing In This City Only As a Blind.

MORE DETAILS COME TO LIGHT

ALL DISAPPEARED TOGETHER

Interesting Facts Which Go to Show That the Biddle Gang Expected to Rob the D. M. Ogilvie Store. Aroused Suspicion And Were Foiled

The exclusive account published in Tuesday evening's News Review concerning the swindling game worked in this city by the Biddle brothers, was effective in bringing to light some additional details today which are taken as positive evidence by the police that the brothers had bigger game in view when they first came here than fleecing customers from whom they took orders for clothing.

At the time the Biddles were working their game a number of visits were made by a suspicious looking couple at D. M. Ogilvie & Co.'s store, whose descriptions given to the police at the time they were first suspected by Mr. Ogilvie, led to the belief after the arrest in Pittsburg of Walter Dorman and Jennie Seebers as members of the Biddle gang that they were identical with the couple that tried, it is believed, to set plans to rob the Ogilvie store.

On each occasion the woman called at the store she was accompanied by the same escort. She never made any purchases, but had the clerks take her to the silk department, where each time she made close inspections of the finest pieces. While the woman thus occupied herself her escort would take the opportunity to make his way to the rear end of the store room, where he was once detected in the act of trying a window.

The clerks were first to become suspicious of the couple, and told Mr. Ogilvie of their strange actions. He in turn reported the matter to Chief Thompson and for two weeks the police watched the store both day and night. Two of the officers wore citizen's clothes during the nights they were on guard, but nothing was seen of the man thought to be Dorman after the police were informed of Mr. Ogilvie's suspicions.

Diligent search during the next few days failed to locate the woman, and it is believed by the police that she left the city with the strange-acting man. It was not known at that time that the Biddles were here—in fact, they were then unknown to the local authorities, so far as their criminal records were concerned—but since the News Review's account of the brother's transactions while here has been sifted down and confirmed by the police, it is the conclusion of the entire force and also Mr. Ogilvie that it was Dorman and the Seeber woman who caused suspicion by their frequent visits at the Ogilvie store.

It was learned today beyond the least doubt that the Biddles were here at the same time and they disappeared at about the time the strange man and woman did. This fact has conduced to clinch as a positive belief an opinion formed some time ago that the quartet came to East Liverpool together with the express purpose of perpetrating a big robbery.

Chief Thompson has made numerous inquiries the past few days in relation to the case and is positive as a result of the information gathered that the vigilance of the police in guarding the Ogilvie store foiled the Biddle gang in a contemplated bold crime.

PETTY THIEVING

One of the Members Lost $16 From His Pocket While in the Gymnasium.

A system of petty thieving has been carried on for some time in the Y. M. C. A. locker rooms, and is causing considerable annoyance. The amounts taken heretofore have been trifling, but yesterday some $16 or $18 was taken from the pocket of one of the members while he was in the gymnasium.

This is a problem that every association has to face sooner or later, and, as a matter of protection, there is placed in the secretary's office a series of lock boxes, 20 in all, where any member can deposit valuables. Besides this the lockers are provided with individual locks, so that anyone taking due precaution can be absolutely sure of losing nothing. The thief or thieves take advantage of the careless ones, however.

AGREEMENT REPUDIATED

Pittsburg Parties Who Agreed to Purchase Gas Wells Near Lisbon, Will Not Do So.

Lisbon, Feb. 7.—The Pittsburg parties who agreed to purchase the oil wells on the Aaron Fink farm west of Lisbon from the Salem Gas and Oil company, it is reported, have gone back back on their agreement, probably because they could not raise the money. Not long ago the Columbiana Gas company, composed principally of Pittsburg men, was organized and incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, with $150,000 capital stock.

The gentlemen who were instrumental in the organization of the corporation were J. H. Diamond and Edward T. Slease, of Pittsburg. The company then secured an option of the territory leased and the six wells owned by the Salem Gas and Oil company, for which option they were to pay a certain amount. At that time Mr. Diamond appeared before the city council and secured a franchise to pipe the gas through Lisbon, but it is now stated that the old company will pipe the gas here.

Interesting Facts Which Go to Show That the Biddle Gang Expected to Rob the D. M. Ogilvie Store. Aroused Suspicion And Were Foiled

The exclusive account published in Tuesday evening's News Review concerning the swindling game worked in this city by the Biddle brothers, was effective in bringing to light some additional details today which are taken as positive evidence by the police that the brothers had bigger game in view when they first came here than fleecing customers from whom they took orders for clothing.

At the time the Biddles were working their game a number of visits were made by a suspicious looking couple at D. M. Ogilvie & Co.'s store, whose descriptions given to the police at the time they were first suspected by Mr. Ogilvie, led to the belief after the arrest in Pittsburg of Walter Dorman and Jennie Seebers as members of the Biddle gang that they were identical with the couple that tried, it is believed, to set plans to rob the Ogilvie store.

On each occasion the woman called at the store she was accompanied by the same escort. She never made any purchases, but had the clerks take her to the silk department, where each time she made close inspections of the finest pieces. While the woman thus occupied herself her escort would take the opportunity to make his way to the rear end of the store room, where he was once detected in the act of trying a window.

The clerks were first to become suspicious of the couple, and told Mr. Ogilvie of their strange actions. He in turn reported the matter to Chief Thompson and for two weeks the police watched the store both day and night. Two of the officers wore citizen's clothes during the nights they were on guard, but nothing was seen of the man thought to be Dorman after the police were informed of Mr. Ogilvie's suspicions.

Diligent search during the next few days failed to locate the woman, and it is believed by the police that she left the city with the strange-acting man. It was not known at that time that the Biddles were here—in fact, they were then unknown to the local authorities, so far as their criminal records were concerned—but since the News Review's account of the brother's transactions while here has been sifted down and confirmed by the police, it is the conclusion of the entire force and also Mr. Ogilvie that it was Dorman and the Seeber woman who caused suspicion by their frequent visits at the Ogilvie store.

It was learned today beyond the least doubt that the Biddles were here at the same time and they disappeared at about the time the strange man and woman did. This fact has conduced to clinch as a positive belief an opinion formed some time ago that the quartet came to East Liverpool together with the express purpose of perpetrating a big robbery.

Chief Thompson has made numerous inquiries the past few days in relation to the case and is positive as a result of the information gathered that the vigilance of the police in guarding the Ogilvie store foiled the Biddle gang in a contemplated bold crime.

CAUGHT IN CANADA THIS MORNING

AN EAST PALESTINE ELECTRICIAN UNDER ARREST.

C. N. Stout Is Accused of Absconding With $800 Belonging to the Town.

Lisbon, February 7.—(Special)—C. N. Stout, of East Palestine, was arrested in Hamilton, Ontario, this morning. He is the electrician who left East Palestine, it is alleged, with about $800 of money belonging to the city. He had charge of the city's lighting and water plants.

PETTY THIEVING

A system of petty thieving has been carried on for some time in the Y. M. C. A. locker rooms, and is causing considerable annoyance. The amounts taken heretofore have been trifling, but yesterday some $16 or $18 was taken from the pocket of one of the members while he was in the gymnasium.

This is a problem that every association has to face sooner or later, and, as a matter of protection, there is placed in the secretary's office a series of lock boxes, 20 in all, where any member can deposit valuables. Besides this the lockers are provided with individual locks, so that anyone taking due precaution can be absolutely sure of losing nothing. The thief or thieves take advantage of the careless ones, however.

AGREEMENT REPUDIATED

Pittsburg Parties Who Agreed to Purchase Gas Wells Near Lisbon, Will Not Do So.

Lisbon, Feb. 7.—The Pittsburg parties who agreed to purchase the oil wells on the Aaron Fink farm west of Lisbon from the Salem Gas and Oil company, it is reported, have gone back back on their agreement, probably because they could not raise the money. Not long ago the Columbiana Gas company, composed principally of Pittsburg men, was organized and incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, with $150,000 capital stock.

The gentlemen who were instrumental in the organization of the corporation were J. H. Diamond and Edward T. Slease, of Pittsburg. The company then secured an option of the territory leased and the six wells owned by the Salem Gas and Oil company, for which option they were to pay a certain amount. At that time Mr. Diamond appeared before the city council and secured a franchise to pipe the gas through Lisbon, but it is now stated that the old company will pipe the gas here.

COASTERS WERE HURT

Two Met With Painful Accidents While Engaged in Sledding Yesterday.

Two serious coasting accidents occurred in the East End yesterday, the attendance of a physician being required in each instance. Yesterday afternoon Roy Mayes was coasting down the hill on Pennsylvania avenue and when near the old school house collided with a sled being drawn up the hill by Miss Katie Stamm. Mayes caught his hand between two sleds, splitting the hand between the first and second fingers. The injury is very painful.

Another serious accident was that which happened to Norman Weger who was sledding on High street, in the rear of the Erie street M. E. church. Weger was coming down the hill, lying on his stomach on his sled and in making the descent the sled passed over some broken glass. Weger's arm struck a piece of glass, which cut the flesh about six inches between the wrist and elbow. He was removed to his home where the injury was dressed by a physician.

HELD HIGH CARNIVAL

Young People Took Possession of a New House And Danced And Fought.

A new house on Erie street was completed a few days ago by Louis Runion, and in honor of the event the house was christened last evening by a dance, given by a number of young people residing in that part of the East End. Securing the services of a lone fiddler the young folks went into the house and soon all were making merry. In the course of events a dispute arose between two of the dancers which resulted in a fight. One of the dancers pulled a gun from his pocket and, flourishing it over his head, frightened almost every person in the house.

Special Officer Edward Wilson happened along just as the fight was at its height, and after quieting matters, the dance continued. One young lady who attended the festivities fainted, and three men ran up stairs and locked themselves in a room until after the storm was over. It is intimated the affair will be aired in police court.

An Explosion Prevented.

What might have become a serious explosion occurred at the Laughlin pottery No. 2 yesterday evening. Shortly after 4 o'clock a gasket around the three-inch gas main about glost kiln No. 20 blew out, causing a large amount of gas to escape. Luckily the escaping gas went into the kiln, but as the accident was soon discovered the gas was turned off, remaining so for an hour when necessary repairs were made. Had the gasket caused a break in the floor quite an explosion would have occurred.

INTEREST DEEPENING

In the Services at the Presbyterian Church—Good Sermons Yesterday.

The interest in the services at the Presbyterian church is deepening day by day. The Christians are becoming greatly concerned for their unsaved friends. Many are the fathers and mothers who are burdened with a desire to see their children saved.

The afternoon service yesterday was well attended and the thrilling story of Abraham's sacrifice of Isaac was Rev. Mr. Biederwolf's theme. He impressed the thoughts that God wants our best. He is richest who gives most that God may enrich him with Himself.

In the evening Rev. Mr. Biederwolf took for his text the strong words of Paul, Romans 9:3, "For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ, for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh." His theme was, "Passover for Saving Souls." (1) It is when joined to Christ. (2) It is satisfied only in the object to be gained. (3) It is satisfied only in saving men.

Prof. Maxwell sang "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" When the invitation was extended to those who desired to become Christians a goodly number responded.

MAN AND HIS LEGS.

The Nether Limbs as an Index to the State of the Mind.

There are many indexes to the mind, but I learned of a new one the other day when I called to see a busy man at his office down on Broad street. When I entered the outer office, it was quite evident that he was in, for I could see him through an open door leaning over his desk quite intent on papers that lay in front of him. I spoke to the clerk in attendance, whom I know real well, and asked that he announce me. He glanced into the other room before speaking.

"Wait a minute or two," he said. "It will be better, for he will have you come in the moment I say you are here."

I didn't quite understand what he meant, but I took a seat to wait a minute or two. I waited five of them and then spoke again.

"Wait until he crosses his legs," answered the clerk.

"What has that to do with it?" I asked.

"Everything," he replied. "He doesn't like to be disturbed when he is busy, and I know he is very busy because he has his legs out straight. A man never thinks hard with his legs crossed. As soon as his mind lets up a little, then he straightens, crosses his legs and is ready for visitors and a chat. When his legs go down again, it is time for the visitor to take his leave. Just bear that in mind and see if I am not right."

As he finished speaking up went the legs, and I was announced and received at once.—New York Herald.

LIVING IN LONDON.

It Is Not a Good Place For a Man of Small Income.

An American who in the classical language of his country is at present "located" in London wants to know whether any city in the world is quite so niggardly as our town. He has been going the round of the London restaurants and has encountered in the management of them a spirit which distresses him. "There is, to begin with," he says, "a charge of from twopence to sixpence for guarding your hat and coat in the cloakroom, and a tip in addition is expected. You want to wash your hands—another twopence or another sixpence and another tip. You take up the menu, and, behold, there is an intimation that a charge of threepence each person will be made under the guise of 'table money.' The charge varies according to the nature of the place. Threepence is the lowest and sixpence perhaps the average. At a great many restaurants it is 1 shilling and in at least two that I have visited 1s. 6d. The only difference is that in the lower priced restaurants it is called 'table money' and in the higher priced ones placed under the captivating heading of 'couvert.' To my mind, an entrance fee frankly demanded at the door would be much less offensive than to find yourself asked at the end of a dinner to pay for the trouble and expense of cleaning up the cutlery you have used."

His conclusion of the whole matter is that "London lives by imposing a fixed tariff on the accessories that in every other city I have ever been to are thrown in gratis," and he thinks that being a gentleman is one of the most expensive professions an Englishman can have. He declares it to be an utter delusion that London is a cheap place to live in. "For the poor man," he says, "the man whose income is less than £800 a year, there is no city where less can be had in the way of comforts and even the necessities of life. In New York it is only the luxuries that cost. The expenses of everyday living may be as great or as small as one cares to make them. New York, in fact, is laid out for the poor man. From the transportation system to the price of such fundamental charges on the household treasury as coal, ice, fuel, meat, bread, milk and fruit, almost everything conspires to bring him in a good return for a very small outlay. All these things are cheaper in New York than in London."—London Chronicle.

Bills In Congress.

The words "has introduced a bill in congress," applied to a senator or representative, usually sound much larger than their ordinary meaning warrants. In order properly to estimate the value of the introduction of a bill one must remember that of 12,000 or 15,000 measures introduced a few hundred only are passed. As for proposed amendments to the constitution, the infant mortality among them is appalling. Each new congress sees a score or more of proposals for a "sixteenth amendment to the constitution." We shall doubtless some time have such a thing, yet three amendments, all of which were consequences of a great civil war, represent the only changes made in the constitution since the presidency of Thomas Jefferson.—Youth's Companion.

Wintering In Colorado And Utah.

The climate of Colorado and Utah has long been world famous, but it is only within recent years that attention has been given to the delightful winter climate of these states. Today physicians all over the United States send their patients to Colorado and Utah to escape the rigors of eastern winters and to benefit by her invigorating atmosphere and health-giving sunshine.

It is not necessary to add an elaborate argument—the conclusion is self-evident and inevitable. The winter climate of Colorado and Utah on the whole presents advantages for the invalid and the pleasure-seeker that cannot fail to command attention.

An erroneous impression prevails that because the Rocky mountains have a high elevation the mercury in the thermometer drops down below zero in the winter season and stops there, and that the snow mounts up with the altitude. The fact is that the average precipitation of moisture in the lowlands of the mountain region during the entire year is only 14.15 inches. With such average precipitation there is practically no danger of snow blockades on the railroads, save at a few points exposed to drifts and these points have been amply protected. This is especially true of the lines of the Denver & Rio Grande and the Rio Grande Western between Denver and Ogden at all seasons of the year. Facts speak for themselves, and the fact is that travel over "The Scenic Line of the World" has gone on with less interruption from snow blockades during the last ten winters than it has upon the majority of railroads in other localities which are popularly supposed to be more free from such delays than the mountain systems. A Theological Nose.

"I was once showing a young Japanese around Boston," says a correspondent of The Living Church, "and casually dropped into Trinity church with him. He was at the time a recent convert to Unitarianism in his own country and was wide awake to everything connected with American civilization and American Christianity.

"A few minutes after entering Trinity, as we approached the center aisle, I noticed him making a distinct sniffling noise and, looking toward him, saw that he was in the act of smelling, his nostrils moving convulsively after the manner of an animal scenting something. Looking surprised and mystified, I at once asked him what was the matter, and in broken English he replied, 'I smell paganism.'

You take up the menu, and, behold, there is an intimation that a charge of threepence each person will be made under the guise of 'table money.' The charge varies according to the nature of the place. Threepence is the lowest and sixpence perhaps the average. At a great many restaurants it is 1 shilling and in at least two that I have visited 1s. 6d. The only difference is that in the lower priced restaurants it is called 'table money' and in the higher priced ones placed under the captivating heading of 'couvert.' To my mind, an entrance fee frankly demanded at the door would be much less offensive than to find yourself asked at the end of a dinner to pay for the trouble and expense of cleaning up the cutlery you have used."

His conclusion of the whole matter is that "London lives by imposing a fixed tariff on the accessories that in every other city I have ever been to are thrown in gratis," and he thinks that being a gentleman is one of the most expensive professions an Englishman can have. He declares it to be an utter delusion that London is a cheap place to live in. "For the poor man," he says, "the man whose income is less than £800 a year, there is no city where less can be had in the way of comforts and even the necessities of life. In New York it is only the luxuries that cost. The expenses of everyday living may be as great or as small as one cares to make them. New York, in fact, is laid out for the poor man. From the transportation system to the price of such fundamental charges on the household treasury as coal, ice, fuel, meat, bread, milk and fruit, almost everything conspires to bring him in a good return for a very small outlay. All these things are cheaper in New York than in London."—London Chronicle.

Bills In Congress.

The words "has introduced a bill in congress," applied to a senator or representative, usually sound much larger than their ordinary meaning warrants. In order properly to estimate the value of the introduction of a bill one must remember that of 12,000 or 15,000 measures introduced a few hundred only are passed. As for proposed amendments to the constitution, the infant mortality among them is appalling. Each new congress sees a score or more of proposals for a "sixteenth amendment to the constitution." We shall doubtless some time have such a thing, yet three amendments, all of which were consequences of a great civil war, represent the only changes made in the constitution since the presidency of Thomas Jefferson.—Youth's Companion.

The great popularity and extensive sale of this preparation can not be a surprise to anyone who is acquainted with its good qualities. Wintering in Colorado And Utah.

The climate of Colorado and Utah has long been world famous, but it is only within recent years that attention has been given to the delightful winter climate of these states. Today physicians all over the United States send their patients to Colorado and Utah to escape the rigors of eastern winters and to benefit by her invigorating atmosphere and health-giving sunshine.

It is not necessary to add an elaborate argument—the conclusion is self-evident and inevitable. The winter climate of Colorado and Utah on the whole presents advantages for the invalid and the pleasure-seeker that cannot fail to command attention.

An erroneous impression prevails that because the Rocky mountains have a high elevation the mercury in the thermometer drops down below zero in the winter season and stops there, and that the snow mounts up with the altitude. The fact is that the average precipitation of moisture in the lowlands of the mountain region during the entire year is only 14.15 inches. With such average precipitation there is practically no danger of snow blockades on the railroads, save at a few points exposed to drifts and these points have been amply protected. This is especially true of the lines of the Denver & Rio Grande and the Rio Grande Western between Denver and Ogden at all seasons of the year. Facts speak for themselves, and the fact is that travel over "The Scenic Line of the World" has gone on with less interruption from snow blockades during the last ten winters than it has upon the majority of railroads in other localities which are popularly supposed to be more free from such delays than the mountain systems. A Theological Nose.

"I was once showing a young Japanese around Boston," says a correspondent of The Living Church, "and casually dropped into Trinity church with him. He was at the time a recent convert to Unitarianism in his own country and was wide awake to everything connected with American civilization and American Christianity.

"A few minutes after entering Trinity, as we approached the center aisle, I noticed him making a distinct sniffling noise and, looking toward him, saw that he was in the act of smelling, his nostrils moving convulsively after the manner of an animal scenting something. Looking surprised and mystified, I at once asked him what was the matter, and in broken English he replied, 'I smell paganism.'

"This method of detecting false doctrines is capable of some curious developments."

Animals In Turkey.

In Turkey the partridge is detested because once it betrayed the prophet to his enemies, and its legs are red because they were dipped in the blood of Hassan. If a man kills a panther, he is imprisoned for twenty-four hours and then is handsomely rewarded. The crane is respected, and it is a crime to kill it.

MINERS DETERMINED.

WILL ILLINOIS OPERATORS AID?

Apparently Willing to Assist Men, as Far as Possible, to Force Run-of-Mine Into Pennsylvania, Indiana and Ohio.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 7.—No agreement was reached yesterday by the joint committee upon which a basis of settlement of the differences between the United Mine Workers and operators of the four competitive mining states can be made.

The sub-committee held a session yesterday morning, at which the question of the miners' demand for a straight increase of 10 per cent was the principal topic of discussion. The miners' representatives on the committee were given to understand by Francis L. Robbins that the operators are a unit against any increase; that this attitude is firm, and that so long as the mine workers insist upon their demands for the introduction of the run-of-mine system and the differential between pick and machine mining the matter of 10 per cent increase, or any other increase, for that matter, will not be considered by the operators.

This was taken by the miners' delegates to indicate that the operators are not so averse to an increase in the price of digging coal as they are to the other features of the submitted scale, and after an hour's fruitless discussion, without favorable results, the committee adjourned to meet yesterday afternoon, when the joint scale committee had been called to hear a report of the sub-committee.

The question was referred back to the sub-committee, with instructions to arrive at a conclusion, if possible, this afternoon.

The Miners' Delegates Determined.

It developed yesterday that the miner delegates generally, while united for the increased wage, are not in favor of sacrificing the possibility of securing an increase through an abandonment of the run-of-mine and differential propositions.

According to rumor one of the most difficult propositions before the joint scale committee has been the apparent willingness of the Illinois operators to assist the miners, as far as possible, to force the run-of-mine system into the Pennsylvania, Indiana and Ohio fields. The organization of the United Mine Workers in Illinois is the strongest in the country, and it has been able to force upon the operators of that field the run-of-mine system, which, as claimed by the operators of that state, works to their loss in competition with the mining interests of the three other states.

FORCEFUL EXPRESSIONS.

The Power of Illustration In the Turn of a Phrase.

James Russell Lowell said, "There's a deal o' solid kicking in the meekest looking mule." If the statement had been, "There's a good deal of obstinacy covered by apparent amiability," the remark might have passed without a moment's notice, but attached to such a figure as the poet used it will be difficult for the mind ever to get rid of it.

Mazzini says, "Labor is the divine law of our existence." This is little more than commonplace, but when he added, "Repose is desertion and suicide," the commonplace was transfigured into a memorable illustration.

A French writer said, "The really efficient laborer will be found not to crowd his day with work." That seems to be forgettable. When he adds, "He will saunter to his task surrounded by a wide halo of ease and leisure," the halo serves the purpose of an explanatory illustration.

President Garfield once said, "Nine times out of ten the best thing that can happen to a young man is to be tossed overboard and compelled to sink or swim for himself." The tossing overboard was the illustration. The sagacious president gave it significance and emphasis by personal reference, "In all my acquaintance I never knew a man to be drowned who was worth the saving."

When Lavater said, "Habit is altogether too arbitrary a master for me to submit to," it was the word "master" that constituted the memorable illustration.

Carlyle, a great master of metaphor, said truly: "No man lives without jostling and being jostled. In all ways he has to elbow himself through the world, giving and receiving offense." The doctrine of this sentence might easily have become a mere platitude, but it is fixed upon the memory by jostling and being jostled and the elbowing of oneself through the world. This illustration is the very making of the argument.—Joseph Parker, D. D., in Homiletic Review.

FORCEFUL EXPRESSIONS.

The Power of Illustration In the Turn of a Phrase.

James Russell Lowell said, "There's a deal o' solid kicking in the meekest looking mule." If the statement had been, "There's a good deal of obstinacy covered by apparent amiability," the remark might have passed without a moment's notice, but attached to such a figure as the poet used it will be difficult for the mind ever to get rid of it.

Mazzini says, "Labor is the divine law of our existence." This is little more than commonplace, but when he added, "Repose is desertion and suicide," the commonplace was transfigured into a memorable illustration.

A French writer said, "The really efficient laborer will be found not to crowd his day with work." That seems to be forgettable. When he adds, "He will saunter to his task surrounded by a wide halo of ease and leisure," the halo serves the purpose of an explanatory illustration.

President Garfield once said, "Nine times out of ten the best thing that can happen to a young man is to be tossed overboard and compelled to sink or swim for himself." The tossing overboard was the illustration. The sagacious president gave it significance and emphasis by personal reference, "In all my acquaintance I never knew a man to be drowned who was worth the saving."

When Lavater said, "Habit is altogether too arbitrary a master for me to submit to," it was the word "master" that constituted the memorable illustration.

Carlyle, a great master of metaphor, said truly: "No man lives without jostling and being jostled. In all ways he has to elbow himself through the world, giving and receiving offense." The doctrine of this sentence might easily have become a mere platitude, but it is fixed upon the memory by jostling and being jostled and the elbowing of oneself through the world. This illustration is the very making of the argument.—Joseph Parker, D. D., in Homiletic Review.

TWELVE PAGES.

New York state is leading all the rest of the country in its efforts to secure good roads. Good roads cost money, and New York is spending money on them. The state this year is expected to appropriate $1,000,000, and country communities, who are willing to help themselves, are to expend as much more, improving their highways. There was a large and enthusiastic good roads convention in Albany last week, and the people of the state appear to be thoroughly awake upon the question. The result of the road-building already accomplished has been to educate the people to the wisdom of such investments more than all the talking and writing ever done on the subject. There is urgent need of such an awakening and of decisive action in Ohio. Why should not the state have a good roads convention, at which those interested in road reform may formulate their ideas and enter upon a campaign for securing such legislation as may be necessary to gain the desired end?

The code bill which is before the legislature proposes radical changes and uniform laws for the government of Ohio municipalities. It has the endorsement of the state bar association and of numerous friends of municipal reform. If it is passed its sponsors say it will greatly simplify the work of future legislatures, preventing a flood of special bills every two years. It will also abolish unnecessary official positions, cheapen the cost of town and city government and prevent expensive litigation. Surely these ends are worth working for, and the general assembly should analyze the bill carefully, ascertain if these claims be true and act accordingly.

The bill raising the salaries of supreme court justices to $6,000 a year has passed the legislature, despite some opposition. Ohio can afford to pay well for the best of talent on the bench of its highest court. But the success of the movement to raise these salaries should not by any means serve as a precedent for a general raise of the pay of state officials and employes.

Prof. Charles W. Pearson will be asked to step down and out of his chair in the Northwestern university. The place to preach the fallibility of the bible is not in a Methodist educational institution, and the professor should have had the grace to resign before he began preaching that sort of doctrine.

Tillman, who champions lynching in this country, is at least consistent in standing up for the bolomen and bandits in the Philippines. He is so seldom consistent that his attitude is worth noting.

It is better not to move at all than to move in a wrong direction. The legislature will have to apply this rule to several hundred bills before it or else it will work harm.

Why don't the Democrats, who are everlastingly finding fault with the administration's Philippine policy, show their patriotism by suggesting a better one?

William C. Whitney is past 60 and has $25,000,000. He has now retired from business, magnanimously resolving to give younger men a chance.

Probably Prince Henry is accustomed to being stared at. If he is not, he is likely to have a disagreeable time of it over here.

Gov. Taft thinks a census of the Filipinos is much needed, but he neglects to mention any one who wants the job of enumerator.

OBITUARY

Joseph R. Shawke.

Lisbon, February 7.—(Special)—Joseph R. Shawke died this morning at his home in this town, aged 82 years and 8 months. He was born in Lisbon June 11, 1819, and has resided here all his life, except four years spent in St. Louis and Cincinnati. His father, Jacob Shawke, was one of the earliest settlers, coming here from York county, Pa., in 1804. At the age of 12, Joseph entered his father's blacksmith shop and continued working at that trade until 1889. His wife, nee Sophia Richards, died last April. Since that time Mr. Shawke had failed rapidly. Three children survive—Charles W., a liveryman of Lisbon; Mrs. C. H. Crook, of Lisbon, and Jacob R., of East Liverpool. Two sisters survive—Misses Martha and Lucretia, of Lisbon, and a brother, George W., of Madison, O.

AT THE THEATER

The Schiller Stock company, supporting the talented young actress, Miss Ella Fontainebleau, will be at the Grand opera house all next week presenting a repertoire of the latest New York successes. The opening play is Walter Leslie's great success, "The City of New York." It is a sensational melodrama full of exciting situations and startling climaxes. A carload of elaborate scenery and effects are carried for this production.

The attendance was not large at the opera house last night, but those who were present thoroughly enjoyed the play, "The Sporting Duchess," presented by the King Dramatic company. The frequent and hearty applause attested the appreciation of the excellent work of the company.

POTTERY NEWS

Quite a number of changes are about to be made in the clay shops of the Dresden pottery, the cost of which will reach into the thousands. Being rushed with business the company was compelled to increase its kiln capacity, and now that this has been done changes will have to be made in other departments. For weeks the clay makers have been so rushed that they have been compelled to work late every evening, it being almost impossible to furnish the clay workers with sufficient raw material. To overcome this inconvenience the company has ordered two new plungers, and one of the old ones will be discarded, giving the company an increase of one more plunger over the number now in use. It is intimated that an additional clay press will soon be installed. The two jiggers that were in the old part of the building are being removed to the new end, one of these being placed in position yesterday, and started. The other old jigger was taken down today and will be started at once. Another new jigger has been ordered and will likely be started some time next week. Work on the new kiln to take the place of an old one, dismantled a few days ago, has been started and it is expected that it will be ready to place by next week. The improvements being made at this plant will result in an increase in the working force of the Dresden in many departments. W. C. Brown, one of the popular salesmen for this firm, who has been on an extened eastern trip, is expected to arrive in the city this evening. His next tour will be through the west and south.

The national officers of the Brotherhood are just now negotiating with Manager Maxwell for the use of Rock Springs park for Monday, June 2, at which time the annual picnic of the organization will be held. Mr. Maxwell has manifested a disposition to deal liberally with those in charge of affairs and the picnic will undoubtedly be held at Rock Springs. The arrangements as they have been outlined by the officials will attract a much larger attendance from other pottery towns, and it is thought all previous efforts will be outdone on this occasion.

Much inconvenience has been caused to local manufacturers on account of a shortage of saggers. While there are a number of concerns here which devote their entire capacity to the manufacture of saggers, the supply is inadequate. Two weeks ago a manufacturer placed an order with a local firm for 500 saggers and so far no delivery has been made. While practically every pottery firm in the city employs from one to three saggermakers, these firms where the shortage exists are compelled to borrow or buy from others.

The annual meeting of the directors of the American Sewer Pipe company was held in Jersey City, N. J., this week. Among the important business transacted was the election of Samuel Goucher, of Toronto, and Ralph Allison, of Pittsburg, as members of the board of directors. U. D. Eddy, of New York, was elected president to succeed Alvah Trowbridge, of Pittsburg.

Harry Wolf, of Allegheny, who has been employed in the office of the Edwin M. Knowles company, has become associated with the Vodrey pottery company as chief office man, taking the place made vacant by Mr. Sloan, who is now at the Chelsea pottery at New Cumberland.

James Thurman, who has been employed as a turner at the East Liverpool pottery for the past six months, has resigned his position and within a few days will return to his former home at Louisville.

Orders are being received at the Union almost faster than the ware can be made. Business is being received from all parts of the country, although nothing but dinner ware is being made by the firm.

Local union No. 44, of which the recently instituted local was formerly a part, has donated $100 to the new organization. The contribution was greatly appreciated by the younger local.

Ernest Oswald, a sticker-up at the Buckeye, has been unable to work on account of a sore hand. Several days ago he cut the member and it is feared blood poisoning will result.

Mr. Bandegrift, of the firm of Russell & Bandergrift, Kalamazoo, Mich., was in the city yesterday, placing some large business with the Dresden.

Wilton McDevitt, a presser at the Buckeye, has been off duty for several days on account of illness.

The joint arbitration board is scheduled for a meeting at the Potters' club tonight. It is hardly likely that the members will get together, as at least one of the representatives will be unable to attend.

Miss Bricelin has taken a position at the Union as finisher. During the past few days a number of new finishers have been given employment at this plant.

William Lester, who has been working at the East Palestine pattery, resumed his old bench at the biscuit end of the Dresden this morning.

Matters pertaining to the coming national convention will likely be taken up by the members of No. 9 at its meeting tonight.

Colin McClain, Jr., will take charge of the lathe made vacant at the East Liverpool by the resignation of James Thurman.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sebring, of Sebring, have been spending several weeks in Arizona. They are now at home.

James Hayes, a handle maker at the Wallace and Chetwynd pottery, is unable to work on account of illness.

Wililam Welsh has taken a position as jiggerman at the Buckeye. He started yesterday.

H. P. Knoblock, of the Dresden pottery, is spending several days in the east on business.

Edward Messer, employed in the clay department of the East Liverpool has been ill.

J. E. Fox has given up his place at the French China company.

FRIENDS AND VISITORS

Mrs. J. R. Hammond is visiting friends in Monaca.

J. Connell left yesterday for Indianola, Ia.

Miss Della Dugan is very ill at her home on Thompson avenue, suffering with an attack of quinsy.

Mrs. Milligan, who has been in this city for several weeks visiting friends, left yesterday for Kingman, Kan.

Mrs. Arthur Wright and daughter Helen, of Alliance, are visiting Mrs. L. H. Brush, of Pennsylvania avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Taylor, of Sixth street, who have been spending several days in New York, have returned to the city.

Attorney O. S. Marshall, of New Cumberland, was in the city yesterday visiting his brother, E. D. Marshall. Mr. Marshall's father is very ill, and as he is quite aged he is very feeble.

NOON-DAY BIBLE CLASSES

To Be Formed in the Potteries Under Auspices of Y. M. C. A.

As a result of the visit of Mr. Nash, the religious work secretary of the Cleveland association, to this city, it is probable that noon day bible classes will be formed in some of the potteries. These classes are simply for the study of the story of the bible, do not touch on controverted subjects and are not in any sense preaching services.

Cleveland has a large number of such classes and Secretary Wright spent the first three days of the week in that city studying the classes there. No very general effort will be possible here, at least not immediately, but it is hoped that at least three classes can be formed.

The plan of group bible classes will also be adopted, several young men gathering at the home of one once a week to study forming a group. Some five groups are already in formation. The group leaders will meet weekly at the association to study the lesson for the succeeding week.

A crowd of excited people was at the city hall when Wooley was brought in and it was thought because of the blood on his face that the officers had beaten him. This was not true, however. Wooley accidentally cut a small gash in his face while brandishing the butcher knife.

Mayor Davidson fined the man $5 and costs this morning and unless the money is paid by Monday he will be taken to the workhouse.

CANNOT RECOVER

Such Is the Opinion of the Doctor Who Is Attending James Grim.

No change was noted today in the condition of James Grim, who was found near the railroad depot yesterday morning suffering from a convulsion, an account of whose illness was exclusively detailed in last evening's News Review. Dr. Bailey, the attending physician, does not believe the man's recovery is possible.

Mrs. A. M. Stoffel claims she first provided Grim with a home after he left his family and arranged with R. G. Stewart to take care of him when Stewart bought the property he now occupies and where Grim is staying.

TWELVE PAGES.

New York state is leading all the rest of the country in its efforts to secure good roads. Good roads cost money, and New York is spending money on them. The state this year is expected to appropriate $1,000,000, and country communities, who are willing to help themselves, are to expend as much more, improving their highways. There was a large and enthusiastic good roads convention in Albany last week, and the people of the state appear to be thoroughly awake upon the question. The result of the road-building already accomplished has been to educate the people to the wisdom of such investments more than all the talking and writing ever done on the subject. There is urgent need of such an awakening and of decisive action in Ohio. Why should not the state have a good roads convention, at which those interested in road reform may formulate their ideas and enter upon a campaign for securing such legislation as may be necessary to gain the desired end?

The code bill which is before the legislature proposes radical changes and uniform laws for the government of Ohio municipalities. It has the endorsement of the state bar association and of numerous friends of municipal reform. If it is passed its sponsors say it will greatly simplify the work of future legislatures, preventing a flood of special bills every two years. It will also abolish unnecessary official positions, cheapen the cost of town and city government and prevent expensive litigation. Surely these ends are worth working for, and the general assembly should analyze the bill carefully, ascertain if these claims be true and act accordingly.

The bill raising the salaries of supreme court justices to $6,000 a year has passed the legislature, despite some opposition. Ohio can afford to pay well for the best of talent on the bench of its highest court. But the success of the movement to raise these salaries should not by any means serve as a precedent for a general raise of the pay of state officials and employes.

Prof. Charles W. Pearson will be asked to step down and out of his chair in the Northwestern university. The place to preach the fallibility of the bible is not in a Methodist educational institution, and the professor should have had the grace to resign before he began preaching that sort of doctrine.

Tillman, who champions lynching in this country, is at least consistent in standing up for the bolomen and bandits in the Philippines. He is so seldom consistent that his attitude is worth noting.

It is better not to move at all than to move in a wrong direction. The legislature will have to apply this rule to several hundred bills before it or else it will work harm.

Why don't the Democrats, who are everlastingly finding fault with the administration's Philippine policy, show their patriotism by suggesting a better one?

William C. Whitney is past 60 and has $25,000,000. He has now retired from business, magnanimously resolving to give younger men a chance.

Probably Prince Henry is accustomed to being stared at. If he is not, he is likely to have a disagreeable time of it over here.

Gov. Taft thinks a census of the Filipinos is much needed, but he neglects to mention any one who wants the job of enumerator.

Joseph R. Shawke.

Lisbon, February 7.—(Special)—Joseph R. Shawke died this morning at his home in this town, aged 82 years and 8 months. He was born in Lisbon June 11, 1819, and has resided here all his life, except four years spent in St. Louis and Cincinnati. His father, Jacob Shawke, was one of the earliest settlers, coming here from York county, Pa., in 1804. At the age of 12, Joseph entered his father's blacksmith shop and continued working at that trade until 1889. His wife, nee Sophia Richards, died last April. Since that time Mr. Shawke had failed rapidly. Three children survive—Charles W., a liveryman of Lisbon; Mrs. C. H. Crook, of Lisbon, and Jacob R., of East Liverpool. Two sisters survive—Misses Martha and Lucretia, of Lisbon, and a brother, George W., of Madison, O.

AT THE THEATER

The Schiller Stock company, supporting the talented young actress, Miss Ella Fontainebleau, will be at the Grand opera house all next week presenting a repertoire of the latest New York successes. The opening play is Walter Leslie's great success, "The City of New York." It is a sensational melodrama full of exciting situations and startling climaxes. A carload of elaborate scenery and effects are carried for this production.

The attendance was not large at the opera house last night, but those who were present thoroughly enjoyed the play, "The Sporting Duchess," presented by the King Dramatic company. The frequent and hearty applause attested the appreciation of the excellent work of the company.

POTTERY NEWS

Quite a number of changes are about to be made in the clay shops of the Dresden pottery, the cost of which will reach into the thousands. Being rushed with business the company was compelled to increase its kiln capacity, and now that this has been done changes will have to be made in other departments. For weeks the clay makers have been so rushed that they have been compelled to work late every evening, it being almost impossible to furnish the clay workers with sufficient raw material. To overcome this inconvenience the company has ordered two new plungers, and one of the old ones will be discarded, giving the company an increase of one more plunger over the number now in use. It is intimated that an additional clay press will soon be installed. The two jiggers that were in the old part of the building are being removed to the new end, one of these being placed in position yesterday, and started. The other old jigger was taken down today and will be started at once. Another new jigger has been ordered and will likely be started some time next week. Work on the new kiln to take the place of an old one, dismantled a few days ago, has been started and it is expected that it will be ready to place by next week. The improvements being made at this plant will result in an increase in the working force of the Dresden in many departments. W. C. Brown, one of the popular salesmen for this firm, who has been on an extened eastern trip, is expected to arrive in the city this evening. His next tour will be through the west and south.

The national officers of the Brotherhood are just now negotiating with Manager Maxwell for the use of Rock Springs park for Monday, June 2, at which time the annual picnic of the organization will be held. Mr. Maxwell has manifested a disposition to deal liberally with those in charge of affairs and the picnic will undoubtedly be held at Rock Springs. The arrangements as they have been outlined by the officials will attract a much larger attendance from other pottery towns, and it is thought all previous efforts will be outdone on this occasion.

Much inconvenience has been caused to local manufacturers on account of a shortage of saggers. While there are a number of concerns here which devote their entire capacity to the manufacture of saggers, the supply is inadequate. Two weeks ago a manufacturer placed an order with a local firm for 500 saggers and so far no delivery has been made. While practically every pottery firm in the city employs from one to three saggermakers, these firms where the shortage exists are compelled to borrow or buy from others.

The annual meeting of the directors of the American Sewer Pipe company was held in Jersey City, N. J., this week. Among the important business transacted was the election of Samuel Goucher, of Toronto, and Ralph Allison, of Pittsburg, as members of the board of directors. U. D. Eddy, of New York, was elected president to succeed Alvah Trowbridge, of Pittsburg.

Harry Wolf, of Allegheny, who has been employed in the office of the Edwin M. Knowles company, has become associated with the Vodrey pottery company as chief office man, taking the place made vacant by Mr. Sloan, who is now at the Chelsea pottery at New Cumberland.

James Thurman, who has been employed as a turner at the East Liverpool pottery for the past six months, has resigned his position and within a few days will return to his former home at Louisville.

Orders are being received at the Union almost faster than the ware can be made. Business is being received from all parts of the country, although nothing but dinner ware is being made by the firm.

Local union No. 44, of which the recently instituted local was formerly a part, has donated $100 to the new organization. The contribution was greatly appreciated by the younger local.

Ernest Oswald, a sticker-up at the Buckeye, has been unable to work on account of a sore hand. Several days ago he cut the member and it is feared blood poisoning will result.

Mr. Bandegrift, of the firm of Russell & Bandergrift, Kalamazoo, Mich., was in the city yesterday, placing some large business with the Dresden.

Wilton McDevitt, a presser at the Buckeye, has been off duty for several days on account of illness.

The joint arbitration board is scheduled for a meeting at the Potters' club tonight. It is hardly likely that the members will get together, as at least one of the representatives will be unable to attend.

Miss Bricelin has taken a position at the Union as finisher. During the past few days a number of new finishers have been given employment at this plant.

William Lester, who has been working at the East Palestine pattery, resumed his old bench at the biscuit end of the Dresden this morning.

Matters pertaining to the coming national convention will likely be taken up by the members of No. 9 at its meeting tonight.

Colin McClain, Jr., will take charge of the lathe made vacant at the East Liverpool by the resignation of James Thurman.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sebring, of Sebring, have been spending several weeks in Arizona. They are now at home.

Wililam Welsh has taken a position as jiggerman at the Buckeye. He started yesterday.

H. P. Knoblock, of the Dresden pottery, is spending several days in the east on business.

Edward Messer, employed in the clay department of the East Liverpool has been ill.

J. E. Fox has given up his place at the French China company.

FRIENDS AND VISITORS

Mrs. J. R. Hammond is visiting friends in Monaca.

J. Connell left yesterday for Indianola, Ia.

Miss Della Dugan is very ill at her home on Thompson avenue, suffering with an attack of quinsy.

Mrs. Milligan, who has been in this city for several weeks visiting friends, left yesterday for Kingman, Kan.

Mrs. Arthur Wright and daughter Helen, of Alliance, are visiting Mrs. L. H. Brush, of Pennsylvania avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Taylor, of Sixth street, who have been spending several days in New York, have returned to the city.

Attorney O. S. Marshall, of New Cumberland, was in the city yesterday visiting his brother, E. D. Marshall. Mr. Marshall's father is very ill, and as he is quite aged he is very feeble.

NOON-DAY BIBLE CLASSES

To Be Formed in the Potteries Under Auspices of Y. M. C. A.

As a result of the visit of Mr. Nash, the religious work secretary of the Cleveland association, to this city, it is probable that noon day bible classes will be formed in some of the potteries. These classes are simply for the study of the story of the bible, do not touch on controverted subjects and are not in any sense preaching services.

Cleveland has a large number of such classes and Secretary Wright spent the first three days of the week in that city studying the classes there. No very general effort will be possible here, at least not immediately, but it is hoped that at least three classes can be formed.

The plan of group bible classes will also be adopted, several young men gathering at the home of one once a week to study forming a group. Some five groups are already in formation. The group leaders will meet weekly at the association to study the lesson for the succeeding week.

A crowd of excited people was at the city hall when Wooley was brought in and it was thought because of the blood on his face that the officers had beaten him. This was not true, however. Wooley accidentally cut a small gash in his face while brandishing the butcher knife.

Mayor Davidson fined the man $5 and costs this morning and unless the money is paid by Monday he will be taken to the workhouse.

CANNOT RECOVER

Such Is the Opinion of the Doctor Who Is Attending James Grim.

No change was noted today in the condition of James Grim, who was found near the railroad depot yesterday morning suffering from a convulsion, an account of whose illness was exclusively detailed in last evening's News Review. Dr. Bailey, the attending physician, does not believe the man's recovery is possible.

Mrs. A. M. Stoffel claims she first provided Grim with a home after he left his family and arranged with R. G. Stewart to take care of him when Stewart bought the property he now occupies and where Grim is staying.

WELL BROKEN HORSES.

The Silent Man Generally Has t Most Manageable Animals.

Has any one ever noticed that a s lent man has usually the best broke horses? It may not be true, but all t men of my acquaintance who do n talk much have well broken horse Drive with them, and you will wond how they manage their horses. N management is visible. The horse go where he is wanted without appare effort on the part of the driver. O famous turfman at least has been n ed for his art in driving a horse to t limit of his speed without making move while his rivals were lifting a yelling and whipping theirs. How d he do it? Don't know, but he was man of few words.

Probably there is a lesson in th The average horse understands only few things thoroughly, only a fe words, signs or commands. The sile man gives only a few, and he does n confuse his horse. The horse is ma to know them thoroughly. He unde stands the man who understands hi It is a pleasure to drive a horse th understands. READING ROOMS

To Be Formally Opened With an Enjoyable Smoker on Saturday Evening.

The directors of the Reading Room Association, of the C. & P. Railroad company, are making great preparations for the formal opening of the reading rooms in the West End next Saturday afternoon and evening. At the opening several prominent railroad officials are expected to be present, among whom are Supt. R. H. Scriven, of Pittsburg; ex-Supt. John Thomas, of Cleveland, and Supt. J. B. McKim, of the Western division at Ft. Wayne.

A vivid idea of the affair and why it is to be given can be gleaned from the following notice, signed by the board of directors, which has been placed in conspicuous places along the line from Pittsburg to Cleveland:

"To all employes of the C. & P. company: The management has kindly donated a building on Main street, just west of Twentieth street, Wellsville, and fitted it up for the employes' reading room association. The building is provided with an office, reading room, smoking room and book room on the first floor and is also provided with modern bath rooms and a large assembly room on the second floor. The directors of the reading room association beg to announce to the employes that this building is now open to them for their accommodation, and in order that all may have an opportunity of seeing just what the company has been pleased to give us, the directors wish to announce that the building will be formally opened with a 'smoker' on Saturday night, February 8, to which all employes are cordially invited."

COUNCIL IS BLAMED

For Failing to Replace a Broken Fire Alarm Box at City Hall.

The city council is being consured quite severely by people living in the vicinity of the city hall, for the action taken at the last meeting in regard to the purchasing of a fire alarm box which is needed at the citl building. The one which is now there was demolished several weeks ago when a man tried to open the box and finding it locked broke it into smithereens with a brick.

With no alarm box at the city hall any residence in the Second ward might burn to the ground before the fire department could be called out. The council gave shortage of money as a reason for not buying a box. The citizens say that they seemed to forget the shortage when they ordered several streets paved.

VESTIBULED TRAINS

Are Promised on the Cleveland and Pittsburg Railroad at an Early Date.

Chief Train Dispatcher Rodgers attended the meeting of the officials of the C. & P. Railroad company at Pittsburg Tuesday and states that the officials decided to give the traveling public on their road better accommodations soon by placing on the line six new vestibuled, well equipped and strictly up-to-date coaches. The cars will be divided into two trains and will be installed on the afternoon run; that is, one train will pass Wellsville for Cleveland at 3:02 p. m. and the other will pass for Pittsburg at 5:30 p. m.

It is not known definitely when the cars will be placed on the road, as they have not yet been built. However, they have been ordered and will likely be finished not later than June 1.

CANDLES.

Their Mellow Light Is Fast Becoming but a Memory.

So markedly is the candle going out of use that the dictionary of a few years hence will probably have to supplement its definition with an illustration. In the glow of electric light, gas and paraffin we are much disposed to pity our immediate forefathers who had to put up with candles.

Yet we retain a strange respect for the candle in certain directions. When we wish to pay the highest reverence, we fall back upon it. The death chamber is lighted with candles. So is the church altar. We cannot but be forced also to the conclusion that higher ideas have been brought out and better matter written by candlelight than have been or probably ever will be by that of gas or electricity.

Shakespeare could not possibly have written all his plays by daylight. Indeed, it is more than probable that the touch of bohemianism in his composition, as in that of his watered down literary descendants today, preferred night to day for turning out its best work. Hamlet's soliloquy upon the existing value of things, Portia's tribute to mercy and the advice of Polonius to Laertes as to the best way of conducting himself in life were probably written between the snuffings of a candle. In particular can one imagine the decisive snuffing and the contemptuous tossing away of the scrap of burned wick at the close of the passage hypothetically disposing of "Cæsar's imperial day."—London Globe.

Quaint Plea For a Pension.

All sorts of special pleas have been made in applications for pensions. One of the most ludicrous was made in Portland. When the applicant was asked is he ever served in the army or navy, he said, "No." Asked as to what grounds he based his application on, he said that he was in eastern Oregon when the Indians went on the warpath; that in making for a point of safety he and some other men were attacked by the Indians, one of the other men being killed and another wounded. He escaped on account of the fleetness of his horse, but the encounter caused him such excitement that he had had occasional fits ever since, and on account of the fits he thought he was entitled to a pension.—Portland Oregonian.

SOUTH SIDE

HELD LAST EVENING BY THE CHESTER COUNCIL.

List of Standing Committees Made Known—Safe Contract Canceled.

The meeting of the city council last evening was of exceedingly short duration, which was attributed to the absence of Mayor Shrader, who was confined to his home with a serious cold. The remaining members were present and opened the meeting by electing J. S. D. Mercer as president pro tem. The minutes of the meeting held Saturday night were read and revealed the names of the men appointed on the several committees. They are:

Street committee—Johnston, Riley and Wells.

City Property Committee—Riley, Hough and Wetzel.

Police Committee—Hough, Wetzel and Wells.

Light Committee—Hough, Wells and Johnston.

Mr. Riley, as chairman of the city property committee, stated that they had cancelled the order for the $123 safe to be purchased from the Milligan Hardware company. He thinks the price to have been paid was too much and that a second-handed safe costing $30 will answer the purpose just as well. He knows of one which can be bought for the latter price which has only been used five years and is in excellent condition.

The city property committee was instructed to order the gas company to immediately place heat and light in the city building. This committee was also commissioned to purchase four cots and other supplies for the proper equipping of the city jail.

Mr. Riley thought that council should name the salaries to be paid the solicitor, street commissioner and city marshal, but the matter was deferred until the next regular meeting, which will be held on Thursday evening, February 13.

COAL SHIPPING FACILITIES

Will Be Greatly Improved By a Proposed New Pennsylvania Line.

The new road will traverse Raccoon creek and the greater part of the distance it will parallel the Wabash road.

Hancock Farmers' Institute.

The farmers' institute of Hancock county will meet in the town hall at Fairview next Monday and Tuesday. Among the prominent persons who will be present are Alva Agee, of Cheshire, O., representative of the Pittsburg Stockman, and Abram McCulloch, of Clinton, W. Va., of the department of agriculture.

VALUE OF AN HONEST EYE.

A Business Man's Experience In Hiring an Office Assistant.

A business man said that he once devoted half a day to hiring a man whom he needed in his office. In answer to his advertisement a great many applicants called. He rejected the first because he would not look him in the eye. "The second man," said the merchant, "was armed with a double barreled recommendation from his pastor, with testimonials as to his business ability and good character; but, though he looked me in the eye, I saw that we could never hope to get along well together, and so I dismissed him. The third interested me the moment he stepped inside the door. He was poorly dressed, and, though his clothes were whole, they were at least two sizes too small. It was evident that his attire troubled him not the least, for he held his head high and as he approached my desk looked me squarely in the eye. He said that he had no recommendation, that he had no business experience, but that he was willing to do his best to please me. In an instant it dawned upon me that before me was the man that I was looking for. He had nothing to recommend him save an honest, bright eye and a pleasant face, but that was sufficient. I engaged him on the spot.

"Since then I have seen fit to advance him over a man who had been with me three years. The latter grumbled, but there was reason for my move—the new man had proved himself worthy of promotion."

Instances might be definitely multiplied of the value of an honest eye. That wonderful window of the soul, the eye, is a sure index to character. If you have it not, cultivate a bright, honest, straightforward look. It will more than repay your effort. Look up and fearlessly meet the eyes of those with whom you converse. Many a choice position has been lost through an indifferent, flinching eye, and many a coveted position has been won through a fearless, honest eye. That kind of eye is better than a hundred recommendations.—Success.

SOLVING A PROBLEM.

The Green Country Brakeman Who Introduced the "Saw By."

Many years ago a green country boy applied to the superintendent of a western railway for work and, somewhat against the superintendent's wish, on account of the danger to life and limb attendant upon such occupation, was given a place as brakeman of a freight train.

On one of his first trips it happened that his train met another freight train at a station where the sidetrack was not long enough to accommodate either of them. The conductors were debating which train should back up to a point where they could pass when the new hand ventured to suggest that neither should back; that they could pass each other by means of the short sidetrack if the thing was managed right.

The idea excited a good deal of laughter on the part of the old train men, but the boy stood his ground.

"Well, how would you go about it?" asked one of the conductors, confident that the lad would soon find himself against a stump.

The boy took up a stick and traced in the sand a diagram to illustrate his plan.

"Good gracious!" said the conductor "I believe that will do it!"

And it did do it. Today every trainman in America probably knows how to "saw by" two long trains on a short sidetrack, but it is not so generally known that the thing was never done until an inexperienced country boy who became the manager of a great railway line worked out the problem for himself.

Betrayed His Ignorance.

"I wish to get a position as brakeman," said the caller respectfully.

The great man sized him up. "Um. Ever have any experience?"

"Sir, I have been a railroad man for eighteen years."

The great man reflected some. "Um," he said. "Er—would you kindly close the door? I seem to feel a draft."

The applicant arose and closed the door gently.

"Huh!" snorted the great man. "Thought you could impose on me, eh? Get right out o' here! A railroad man would have shut that door so hard it would have jarred my false teeth out!"

The great man was right.—San Francisco Bulletin.

READING ROOMS

To Be Formally Opened With an Enjoyable Smoker on Saturday Evening.

The directors of the Reading Room Association, of the C. & P. Railroad company, are making great preparations for the formal opening of the reading rooms in the West End next Saturday afternoon and evening. At the opening several prominent railroad officials are expected to be present, among whom are Supt. R. H. Scriven, of Pittsburg; ex-Supt. John Thomas, of Cleveland, and Supt. J. B. McKim, of the Western division at Ft. Wayne.

A vivid idea of the affair and why it is to be given can be gleaned from the following notice, signed by the board of directors, which has been placed in conspicuous places along the line from Pittsburg to Cleveland:

"To all employes of the C. & P. company: The management has kindly donated a building on Main street, just west of Twentieth street, Wellsville, and fitted it up for the employes' reading room association. The building is provided with an office, reading room, smoking room and book room on the first floor and is also provided with modern bath rooms and a large assembly room on the second floor. The directors of the reading room association beg to announce to the employes that this building is now open to them for their accommodation, and in order that all may have an opportunity of seeing just what the company has been pleased to give us, the directors wish to announce that the building will be formally opened with a 'smoker' on Saturday night, February 8, to which all employes are cordially invited."

COUNCIL IS BLAMED

For Failing to Replace a Broken Fire Alarm Box at City Hall.

The city council is being consured quite severely by people living in the vicinity of the city hall, for the action taken at the last meeting in regard to the purchasing of a fire alarm box which is needed at the citl building. The one which is now there was demolished several weeks ago when a man tried to open the box and finding it locked broke it into smithereens with a brick.

With no alarm box at the city hall any residence in the Second ward might burn to the ground before the fire department could be called out. The council gave shortage of money as a reason for not buying a box. The citizens say that they seemed to forget the shortage when they ordered several streets paved.

ELOPED AND MARRIED

A Wellsville Man And a Rochester Girl United in Matrimony at Youngstown.

A dispatch from Rochester, Pa., states that James Matthews, of Wellsville, and Lillian Miller, a well known young woman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Miller, of Rochester, eloped to Youngstown Wednesday and were married.

Both bride and groom are under age. They returned to the home of the bride's parents yesterday and were duly forgiven.

VESTIBULED TRAINS

Are Promised on the Cleveland and Pittsburg Railroad at an Early Date.

Chief Train Dispatcher Rodgers attended the meeting of the officials of the C. & P. Railroad company at Pittsburg Tuesday and states that the officials decided to give the traveling public on their road better accommodations soon by placing on the line six new vestibuled, well equipped and strictly up-to-date coaches. The cars will be divided into two trains and will be installed on the afternoon run; that is, one train will pass Wellsville for Cleveland at 3:02 p. m. and the other will pass for Pittsburg at 5:30 p. m.

It is not known definitely when the cars will be placed on the road, as they have not yet been built. However, they have been ordered and will likely be finished not later than June 1.

CANDLES.

Their Mellow Light Is Fast Becoming but a Memory.

So markedly is the candle going out of use that the dictionary of a few years hence will probably have to supplement its definition with an illustration. In the glow of electric light, gas and paraffin we are much disposed to pity our immediate forefathers who had to put up with candles.

Yet we retain a strange respect for the candle in certain directions. When we wish to pay the highest reverence, we fall back upon it. The death chamber is lighted with candles. So is the church altar. We cannot but be forced also to the conclusion that higher ideas have been brought out and better matter written by candlelight than have been or probably ever will be by that of gas or electricity.

Shakespeare could not possibly have written all his plays by daylight. Indeed, it is more than probable that the touch of bohemianism in his composition, as in that of his watered down literary descendants today, preferred night to day for turning out its best work. Hamlet's soliloquy upon the existing value of things, Portia's tribute to mercy and the advice of Polonius to Laertes as to the best way of conducting himself in life were probably written between the snuffings of a candle. In particular can one imagine the decisive snuffing and the contemptuous tossing away of the scrap of burned wick at the close of the passage hypothetically disposing of "Cæsar's imperial day."—London Globe.

Quaint Plea For a Pension.

All sorts of special pleas have been made in applications for pensions. One of the most ludicrous was made in Portland. When the applicant was asked is he ever served in the army or navy, he said, "No." Asked as to what grounds he based his application on, he said that he was in eastern Oregon when the Indians went on the warpath; that in making for a point of safety he and some other men were attacked by the Indians, one of the other men being killed and another wounded. He escaped on account of the fleetness of his horse, but the encounter caused him such excitement that he had had occasional fits ever since, and on account of the fits he thought he was entitled to a pension.—Portland Oregonian.

SOUTH SIDE

List of Standing Committees Made Known—Safe Contract Canceled.

The meeting of the city council last evening was of exceedingly short duration, which was attributed to the absence of Mayor Shrader, who was confined to his home with a serious cold. The remaining members were present and opened the meeting by electing J. S. D. Mercer as president pro tem. The minutes of the meeting held Saturday night were read and revealed the names of the men appointed on the several committees. They are:

Street committee—Johnston, Riley and Wells.

City Property Committee—Riley, Hough and Wetzel.

Light Committee—Hough, Wells and Johnston.

Mr. Riley, as chairman of the city property committee, stated that they had cancelled the order for the $123 safe to be purchased from the Milligan Hardware company. He thinks the price to have been paid was too much and that a second-handed safe costing $30 will answer the purpose just as well. He knows of one which can be bought for the latter price which has only been used five years and is in excellent condition.

The city property committee was instructed to order the gas company to immediately place heat and light in the city building. This committee was also commissioned to purchase four cots and other supplies for the proper equipping of the city jail.

Mr. Riley thought that council should name the salaries to be paid the solicitor, street commissioner and city marshal, but the matter was deferred until the next regular meeting, which will be held on Thursday evening, February 13.

The new road will traverse Raccoon creek and the greater part of the distance it will parallel the Wabash road.

A Business Man's Experience In Hiring an Office Assistant.

A business man said that he once devoted half a day to hiring a man whom he needed in his office. In answer to his advertisement a great many applicants called. He rejected the first because he would not look him in the eye. "The second man," said the merchant, "was armed with a double barreled recommendation from his pastor, with testimonials as to his business ability and good character; but, though he looked me in the eye, I saw that we could never hope to get along well together, and so I dismissed him. The third interested me the moment he stepped inside the door. He was poorly dressed, and, though his clothes were whole, they were at least two sizes too small. It was evident that his attire troubled him not the least, for he held his head high and as he approached my desk looked me squarely in the eye. He said that he had no recommendation, that he had no business experience, but that he was willing to do his best to please me. In an instant it dawned upon me that before me was the man that I was looking for. He had nothing to recommend him save an honest, bright eye and a pleasant face, but that was sufficient. I engaged him on the spot.

"Since then I have seen fit to advance him over a man who had been with me three years. The latter grumbled, but there was reason for my move—the new man had proved himself worthy of promotion."

For nearly an hour the two men waited with impatience, which finally passed Alden's power of endurance.

"I must get some word from her," he said after much pacing of the floor. "There must be serious danger or he would not stay so long."

Elmendorf pointed out the obvious possibility that Kendall might long since have answered Miss Maclane's summons and have gone upon any of a hundred other duties, but Alden would not be thus quieted. He went out to the office to ask in what way he could communicate with the doctor, and within a minute after his departure Kendall entered the room.

He had a large glass jar in his hand, which seemed to contain milk. This he set down upon the table and immediately touched an electric button.

"How is she?" asked Elmendorf in a tone betraying the most earnest solicitude.

"Better, better," replied Kendall. "I think there's no longer any danger. Where is Mr. Alden?"

"No longer any danger!" exclaimed Elmendorf, ignoring the question. "Has there been any?"

"Well," said Kendall, "she fainted again."

"Again!"

"The first time was just before you came up," said Kendall. "Don't say anything about this. We had just given her a little luncheon, and I thought perhaps she might have had some small stomach trouble; oppresses the heart sometimes, you know. But I don't like this second attack Heart failure after the injury and the nervous exhaustion wouldn't be the most unlikely thing in the world, you know. Ah! Come here, George."

The last words were addressed to a youth in uniform who had answered the doctor's ring. Kendall gave him some money and whispered to him near the door. When he turned, as George departed, he saw Elmendorf standing rigid, with his blue eyes unusually wide open.

"What do you want of two white mice?" he demanded.

"Really, now"— Kendall began.

"Look here," interrupted Elmendorf. "If there's anything of that kind going on, I'm the man you need. Don't hide anything from me; for the little girl's sake, don't do it, doctor."

Kendall bit his lips and hesitated. Then he said suddenly, as steps were heard in the hall:

"Get him out of here and come back."

Alden entered and stopped short, in his own peculiar fashion, with his eyes on the doctor.

"It's all right," said Kendall. "Miss Miller showed some indications of weakness, but is doing nicely now. I should think you might see her about 5 o'clock."

"Well, doctor, I'm glad everything's all right," said Elmendorf. "I began to be anxious, you were so long away. But what you've said has made me feel easy again, and so I think the best thing that Mr. Alden and I can do is to try to get some light on Mr. Robinson's strange conduct. The man may have struck some kind of a clew and have rushed right off to verify it without waiting to consult anybody."

"I didn't think of that," responded Alden. "It may be that you've found the explanation."

"I would suggest that you go to his house," said Elmendorf. "Meanwhile I'll telephone to your office and one or two other places and see if I can get track of him. But the likeliest place is his house. Wait there for me. I'll join you before 3."

This arrangement was agreed upon, and the two men went out together. Elmendorf was busy with the telephone for half an hour, but he failed to extract valuable information from any person with whom he talked, although the chief of the detective bureau was one of them.

Returning to the hospital, he went at once to Kendall's room. In answer to his rap and the sound of his voice the door was unlocked and he was admitted. In passing he glanced searchingly at Kendall's face, which wore an expression of extreme anxiety; then he advanced to the table in the middle of the room, from which he lifted a newspaper, thus revealing the bodies of two little white mice.

Elmendorf regarded them with a look of horror.

"Good Lord!" he gasped. "You don't mean it?"

Kendall nodded. Then he sat down and rested his head on his hands for a few seconds, while Elmendorf gathered breath and heart for the next question.

"What was in the jar—milk?"

"No," replied Kendall. "It is a kind of liquid food preparation. The basis of it is milk; but, unfortunately," he added, looking up at the detective, "it will keep."

"Been in the room several days, you mean?" said Elmendorf. "If it was ordinary milk that had been dosed, we could narrow it down to a few hours. But this stuff—why, absolutely everybody connected with the case has had a chance at it."

"How shall I tell her?" muttered Kendall.

"Her?"

The doctor gave a nervous start.

"Miss Maclane," he said. "This will be a hard story for her to hear."

"You are right," replied Elmendorf, "after all the care she's taken, the devotion she's shown to that poor child, who was nothing to her—worse than nothing, in fact—an enemy, you might say."

"Now, look here"— exclaimed Kendall hoarsely as he got upon his feet.

"No, no!" cried Elmendorf. "I don't mean to accuse her. That would be absurd. We mustn't waste time. What was the poison?"

"I don't know," replied Kendall. "Of course there was no time for analysis. That's why I tried it on these small animals. It's some kind of a heart depressant—the very thing to use in a case of this kind, where the condition is one of weakness and especially where there is an injury in the region of the organ."

"But didn't these mice show any symptoms that you could recognize?" asked Elmendorf.

"No; nothing definite I could name several poisons that would answer all the requirements. It isn't necessary to know immediately. The treatment would be the same in any case. And the danger is over, I believe."

"Unless it's somewhere else," said Elmendorf; "in her medicines, perhaps."

"That wouldn't be possible without assuming something that can't be assumed—not in my presence, at any rate."

"You mean that Miss Maclane"—

"Precisely," said Kendall. "And as there can be no thought of such a thing we conclude that this infernal thing"—and he tapped the jar with his knuckles—"which was handy for everybody, wide mouthed and all that—Oh, I have been an idiot!"

"She's been having this right along," said Elmendorf. "That might indicate"—

"Nothing until we know just what the stuff is and how much of it we have to deal with," replied Kendall. "The effects observed may come from what she ate this noon or be the general result of small, repeated doses."

"There's one thing," said Elmendorf with decision—"this villainous act must have been done by somebody who knew that the food was there, by some one who had been in the room several times"—

"Don't!" groaned Kendall. "By heavens, I can't bear to think of it! I like Alden. I can't believe this of him. And—and she loves him; she loves him just as much now as ever."

"Miss Maclane?" said Elmendorf. "My friend, I don't believe it."

Kendall looked up at him with a blank stare and shook his head.

CHAPTER XVI.

ELSIE PERPETRATES A JEST.

"THEY say," remarked Elsie, "that people always feel particularly well just before they die. Do you remember Bernhardt in 'Camille,' the very last words before she dies in Armand's arms: 'I shall live! Ah, how well I feel!' How I cried when she said that! And then Gaston says, 'She sleeps.' Isn't that a lovely scene?"

"As it came to your mind at this moment," said Brenda, "I joyfully infer that you are feeling very much better."

"You must think I am silly to talk so much about dying," said Elsie. "I am soggy with sentimentality."

"You have mentioned it on just four occasions," said Brenda, "including this, but it seems often to us because we don't wish to lose you and to yourself because really and truly you don't wish to die. On the whole, you have been as cheerful as any girl could possibly be under the circumstances, and as for your sentimentality, my dear, I'd give the world to have some of it myself."

"I was going to say," continued Elsie, "that my motive for continually harping on it is that you may know I am not afraid, and afterward you may tell Mr. Alden."

This exchange of pleasantries upon a cheerful subject occurred during the time when Kendall was experimenting with the white mice.

"I must have been pretty near it the last time," said Elsie. "It was double. I scarcely knew what was the matter when it began, even though I'd fainted such a little while before. It was like drifting, drifting away. You are surprised. You think you must stop, and before you really have time to be frightened you are gone. But I waked just for a second—just long enough to remember and realize; then down, down, down, sideways to the left there, slipping away from the room and the light. The last was a sensation that they were lowering me into the ground. But I'm going to be cremated. You've promised me that, Brenda."

Then, catching the expression of amused horror—if that can be—on Brenda's face, she laughed with the most delicious and clear sound, like the singing of birds.

"Oh, but it hurts to laugh," she said. "You mustn't make me do it."

"I?" cried Brenda. "You're the first that ever accused me of being amusing."

"Do you know," said Elsie, "that of the two of us you're the blue one? It's much more cheerful to talk about dying than to 'roast' oneself as you do."

"Roasting is popularly supposed to be one step beyond dying," replied Brenda. "But I suppose the roasting you mean is the saying of uncomplimentary things. My child, I can't help it; I suffer by contrast."

"With me?" cried Elsie. "Now you really are amusing. If I had your hair and eyes! Well, that's absurd, of course. But do you know I lie here

This is the way you say: 'Good morning, Dr. Kendall. * * * Ah, thank you so much. * * * Shall we see you again soon? * * * Goodby.' You make all the little things mean something. That's dignity, personality. I haven't any more than a blade of grass, but I'm gaining on it. If I live another week, I shall die and go to Daniel Frohman's No. 1 company instead of to heaven. I'd rather."

"Do I speak like that when I address Dr. Kendall?" said Brenda, with a slight access of color. "Well, it may be so. You are very clever, my dear."

"This is the way you hold your arms when you walk," said Elsie. "Isn't that pretty? Of course I can't do it very well lying down, but see the fingers and the ease of the wrist. Were you taught to do that?"

"I used to have a governess who was crazy on Delsarte," replied Brenda. "But she presently went crazy on all other subjects also, and we had to send the poor thing to an institution. I was not aware of my debt to her."

"You owe her a great deal," said Elsie. "I wish I'd had a lunatic of that kind in my family. I couldn't afford to have much teaching. Of course I had some, but when I found what my mother was enduring in order to pay for it—well, I took an engagement with the first thing that came along. And it was a barnstorming crew! We gave six plays a week, and I had to learn a long part in every one of them. The second Monday, in the afternoon, the leading lady came into my room and found me huddled up on the floor in the corner gibbering—just gibbering, that was all—words out of all the plays, as she told me afterward, all jumbled together, and I was cross eyed with sitting up all night studying under little flickering gas jets. Yes, that's the way she found me, and the room was as cold as a barn too. I had the bed quilt wrapped around my shoulders and my arm through a hole in it.

"The leading lady yelled to the juvenile man, and he really was juvenile—about 18, as I remember. She said, 'Go get a glass of brandy!' The juvenile man went down to the bar and came back with a tumbler solid full. He had to carry it carefully in order to keep from spilling any. The leading lady was a temperance woman. She never touched a drop of wine, and, in fact, she was a regular straitlaced New England pilgrim, but somebody had told her once that brandy was good for the thing that I had—'white brain,' we call it. The juvenile man didn't know how much brandy a person ought to take, and I—well, I didn't know anything. So I drank it all, and then I lay down on the bed, and the leading lady covered me with everything she could find, and pretty soon the bed got up and stood on the ceiling, and I didn't care at all.

"When it came time to go to the theater (Brenda, it's disgraceful, but I was so—so drunk that I couldn't walk straight) the leading lady got me up and told the juvenile man to walk me around the block, and he walked me around about fifty times in the snow. We were in a little Minnesota town, and it had snowed for a week. When he took me to the theater, I was perfectly sober, and I didn't care for anything. I had no troubles whatever. I walked up to the stage manager, and I said cheerfully, 'Well, what do we play tonight?' He told me, and I couldn't remember ever to have heard of it, but I got out my part and studied it while I was making up.

"When I went on, I knew about half of my first scene, which was the longest one I had in the play. But I didn't care. I'd always been troubled with stage fright more or less, but not this time—not a fright. When I forgot, I waited calmly for the prompter, who was off left, having a fit. By and by I had to go across right and sit down by a table. I knew I couldn't hear the prompter there, so I walked over and got the table and dragged it clear across the stage, and the audience applauded because I did it so naturally.

"Then I went crazy, and what happened afterward I scarcely know. But when I came off after the thrilling climax of the scene I fell into the leading lady's arms, and she hugged me up tight. She said: 'You never played so well as that before. You were like Julia Marlowe.' And she kissed me on both cheeks. Julia Marlowe was my idol then, and I cried with heavenly joy on the leading lady's neck. That's all true, just as it happened, Brenda, and I never had stage fright afterward."

"Poor little Elsie!" said Brenda, kissing her. "It was a hard school where you were taught."

"It was," said Elsie. "Yet I think I wouldn't have amounted to much anyway. How could any mortal man fail to see the difference between you and me?"

"My child," said Brenda, "no man can. Why, the brass knobs on the posts of this bed know the difference between you and me—the vital, essential difference. They love you in their little brass hearts. Everybody loves you. Dr. Kendall, for a cold blooded sawyer of bones who could amputate my head without a trace of emotion, takes your hand with the eternal reverence of man for woman, and when he gives you pain I can see his own heart shrink. But he treats me as if I were a gentleman whom he had met at the club."

Elsie opened her eyes so wide that they seemed to light the room as she stared at Brenda, whose cheeks were flushed by her unusual earnestness.

"I am glad to hear you speak like that," she said.

Brenda rose and walked across to the window. Then she returned to the bed and took Elsie's hand.

"I am going to open my heart to you," she said. "It was not because Clarence Alden preferred you to me that I lost my self control that last day. I cared nothing for you, despised you; I admitted no comparison. It was because, though the intensity of his own nature for a time deceived him, he never really loved me at all. Nobody ever loved me. I am called good looking, even a beauty, in the society columns of the papers, and I am so rich that I have attracted many men. But not one of them was able to present even a creditable counterfeit of love (though some of them could counterfeit almost anything else, from good breeding to the national currency) until Mr. Alden entered the lists. That's hardly fair to him; he was sincere, but mistaken."

"Yet I didn't have at all the feeling that I have now," she continued. "It was only that last day that I became enraged, mostly at myself. It is since I have come here, since I have known you, the most womanly of God's creatures, that I have had some true comprehension of my own lack, some honest sorrow for it."

"Only since you have been here," said Elsie. "How remarkable! But, Brenda, it is sweet of you to talk this way to me, and I am so glad, so very glad! How long have you known Dr. Kendall?"

"What a queer question!" said Brenda. "About two years, but we haven't met a dozen times. By the way, he is going to be married."

"He is going to be married!" exclaimed Elsie. "To whom?"

"I don't know," Brenda replied. "From something he said the other day, I judge there's a difficulty. I don't know the lady's name."

"Well," said Elsie, letting her head sink back on the pillow as one relieved, "you will when it happens."

"If you mean that he cares anything for me, you are quite mistaken," said Brenda. "His manner when he is in this room should show that. I am nothing—a piece of furniture. Do you know, it has inspired me with something like jealousy—jealousy merely of the difference between you and me, which is the theme we started with."

"I'll show you what Dr. Kendall thinks of that difference," said Elsie. "Wait till he comes in here again. I'll suggest that you're going away, and then you watch him. He'll know that I'm going to stay till I'm carted away. But watch him."

"You must not do it," said Brenda. But Elsie insisted that she should, and they were still having a cheerful little quarrel about it when they were interrupted by Kendall's familiar rap.

You Cannot Extirpate Ideas By Legislation

By JOHN W. GOFF, Recorder of New York

I THINK we assume a little too much if we make the mistake of congratulating ourselves on the present state of our society and on our position in it. The aristocracy and nobility of France took the same position before the revolution in regard to what they called their rights. But was it not their lives which caused the revolution? The nobles amused themselves in luxury and wealth while the people starved. WHO WERE THE ANARCHISTS? THE PEOPLE OR THEY?

I recall a few years ago, during the period of depression, when thousands of men were without work, a meeting of workingmen in Tompkins square, New York city. Four platforms had been built, and from each of them speakers were addressing the people on the rights of labor and suggesting methods for obtaining work for the unemployed. The audience crowded the square.

Suddenly a squad of policemen entered the square. They clubbed men, women and children indiscriminately. No attempt was made to arrest anybody because no law had been violated.

Now, suppose you had been clubbed just because you had been standing in the square listening to one of the speakers. On your way to the hospital to have your wounds dressed do you think that you could have been very ecstatic about the present government?

Anarchy is madness. Its theories are subversive of law and order. In practice they lead to murder and plunder, and no right thinking man can advocate them.

If we look back to the time following the assassination of President McKinley and the hectic excitement which prevailed then, we must confess that if ever anarchistic tendencies were expressed it was then.

One man—and he wore the garb that indicates the messenger of the Prince of Peace—even suggested that at the execution of Czolgosz all the power houses of the United States should be connected with the electric chair in order to make the execution a popular one.

IN OUR EFFORTS TO DEVISE LEGISLATION FOR REPRESSING ANARCHY THERE IS GRAVE DANGER THAT WE MAY GO TO THE OTHER EXTREME.

You cannot extirpate ideas by legislation. Laws never made men and women virtuous. Do not endeavor to repress an idea. If the idea is right, it will triumph, and the repressive methods will prove only so much fuel to feed the flame. When wrong, ideas die of themselves. IN DEALING WITH ANARCHY LET US REMEMBER THAT IF OUR GOVERNMENT IS FOUNDED ON RIGHTEOUSNESS THEN ANARCHY IS A CRAZE AND THIS CRAZE WILL PASS AS OTHER CRAZES HAVE IN THE WORLD'S HISTORY.

For nearly an hour the two men waited with impatience, which finally passed Alden's power of endurance.

"I must get some word from her," he said after much pacing of the floor. "There must be serious danger or he would not stay so long."

Elmendorf pointed out the obvious possibility that Kendall might long since have answered Miss Maclane's summons and have gone upon any of a hundred other duties, but Alden would not be thus quieted. He went out to the office to ask in what way he could communicate with the doctor, and within a minute after his departure Kendall entered the room.

He had a large glass jar in his hand, which seemed to contain milk. This he set down upon the table and immediately touched an electric button.

"How is she?" asked Elmendorf in a tone betraying the most earnest solicitude.

"Better, better," replied Kendall. "I think there's no longer any danger. Where is Mr. Alden?"

"No longer any danger!" exclaimed Elmendorf, ignoring the question. "Has there been any?"

"Well," said Kendall, "she fainted again."

"Again!"

"The first time was just before you came up," said Kendall. "Don't say anything about this. We had just given her a little luncheon, and I thought perhaps she might have had some small stomach trouble; oppresses the heart sometimes, you know. But I don't like this second attack Heart failure after the injury and the nervous exhaustion wouldn't be the most unlikely thing in the world, you know. Ah! Come here, George."

The last words were addressed to a youth in uniform who had answered the doctor's ring. Kendall gave him some money and whispered to him near the door. When he turned, as George departed, he saw Elmendorf standing rigid, with his blue eyes unusually wide open.

"What do you want of two white mice?" he demanded.

"Really, now"— Kendall began.

"Look here," interrupted Elmendorf. "If there's anything of that kind going on, I'm the man you need. Don't hide anything from me; for the little girl's sake, don't do it, doctor."

Kendall bit his lips and hesitated. Then he said suddenly, as steps were heard in the hall:

"Get him out of here and come back."

Alden entered and stopped short, in his own peculiar fashion, with his eyes on the doctor.

"It's all right," said Kendall. "Miss Miller showed some indications of weakness, but is doing nicely now. I should think you might see her about 5 o'clock."

"Well, doctor, I'm glad everything's all right," said Elmendorf. "I began to be anxious, you were so long away. But what you've said has made me feel easy again, and so I think the best thing that Mr. Alden and I can do is to try to get some light on Mr. Robinson's strange conduct. The man may have struck some kind of a clew and have rushed right off to verify it without waiting to consult anybody."

"I didn't think of that," responded Alden. "It may be that you've found the explanation."

"I would suggest that you go to his house," said Elmendorf. "Meanwhile I'll telephone to your office and one or two other places and see if I can get track of him. But the likeliest place is his house. Wait there for me. I'll join you before 3."

This arrangement was agreed upon, and the two men went out together. Elmendorf was busy with the telephone for half an hour, but he failed

Returning to the hospital, he went at once to Kendall's room. In answer to his rap and the sound of his voice the door was unlocked and he was admitted. In passing he glanced searchingly at Kendall's face, which wore an expression of extreme anxiety; then he advanced to the table in the middle of the room, from which he lifted a newspaper, thus revealing the bodies of two little white mice.

Elmendorf regarded them with a look of horror.

"Good Lord!" he gasped. "You don't mean it?"

Kendall nodded. Then he sat down and rested his head on his hands for a few seconds, while Elmendorf gathered breath and heart for the next question.

"What was in the jar—milk?"

"No," replied Kendall. "It is a kind of liquid food preparation. The basis of it is milk; but, unfortunately," he added, looking up at the detective, "it will keep."

"Been in the room several days, you mean?" said Elmendorf. "If it was ordinary milk that had been dosed, we could narrow it down to a few hours. But this stuff—why, absolutely everybody connected with the case has had a chance at it."

"How shall I tell her?" muttered Kendall.

"Her?"

The doctor gave a nervous start.

"Miss Maclane," he said. "This will be a hard story for her to hear."

"You are right," replied Elmendorf, "after all the care she's taken, the devotion she's shown to that poor child, who was nothing to her—worse than nothing, in fact—an enemy, you might say."

"Now, look here"— exclaimed Kendall hoarsely as he got upon his feet.

"No, no!" cried Elmendorf. "I don't mean to accuse her. That would be absurd. We mustn't waste time. What was the poison?"

"I don't know," replied Kendall. "Of course there was no time for analysis. That's why I tried it on these small animals. It's some kind of a heart depressant—the very thing to use in a case of this kind, where the condition is one of weakness and especially where there is an injury in the region of the organ."

"But didn't these mice show any symptoms that you could recognize?" asked Elmendorf.

"No; nothing definite I could name several poisons that would answer all the requirements. It isn't necessary to know immediately. The treatment would be the same in any case. And the danger is over, I believe."

"Unless it's somewhere else," said Elmendorf; "in her medicines, perhaps."

"That wouldn't be possible without assuming something that can't be assumed—not in my presence, at any rate."

"You mean that Miss Maclane"—

"Precisely," said Kendall. "And as there can be no thought of such a thing we conclude that this infernal thing"—and he tapped the jar with his knuckles—"which was handy for everybody, wide mouthed and all that—Oh, I have been an idiot!"

"She's been having this right along," said Elmendorf. "That might indicate"—

"Nothing until we know just what the stuff is and how much of it we have to deal with," replied Kendall. "The effects observed may come from what she ate this noon or be the general result of small, repeated doses."

"There's one thing," said Elmendorf with decision—"this villainous act must have been done by somebody who knew that the food was there, by some one who had been in the room several times"—

"Don't!" groaned Kendall. "By heavens, I can't bear to think of it! I like Alden. I can't believe this of him. And—and she loves him; she loves him just as much now as ever."

"Miss Maclane?" said Elmendorf. "My friend, I don't believe it."

Kendall looked up at him with a blank stare and shook his head.

CHAPTER XVI.

ELSIE PERPETRATES A JEST.

"THEY say," remarked Elsie, "that people always feel particularly well just before they die. Do you remember Bernhardt in 'Camille,' the very last words before she dies in Armand's arms: 'I shall live! Ah, how well I feel!' How I cried when she said that! And then Gaston says, 'She sleeps.' Isn't that a lovely scene?"

"As it came to your mind at this moment," said Brenda, "I joyfully infer that you are feeling very much better."

"You must think I am silly to talk so much about dying," said Elsie. "I am soggy with sentimentality."

"You have mentioned it on just four occasions," said Brenda, "including this, but it seems often to us because we don't wish to lose you and to yourself because really and truly you don't wish to die. On the whole, you have been as cheerful as any girl could possibly be under the circumstances, and as for your sentimentality, my dear, I'd give the world to have some of it myself."

"I was going to say," continued Elsie, "that my motive for continually harping on it is that you may know I am not afraid, and afterward you may tell Mr. Alden."

This exchange of pleasantries upon a cheerful subject occurred during the time when Kendall was experimenting with the white mice.

"I must have been pretty near it the last time," said Elsie. "It was double. I scarcely knew what was the matter when it began, even though I'd fainted such a little while before. It was like drifting, drifting away. You are surprised. You think you must stop, and before you really have time to be frightened you are gone. But I waked just for a second—just long enough to remember and realize; then down, down, down, sideways to the left there, slipping away from the room and the light. The last was a sensation that they were lowering me into the ground. But I'm going to be cremated. You've promised me that, Brenda."

I THINK we assume a little too much if we make the mistake of congratulating ourselves on the present state of our society and on our position in it. The aristocracy and nobility of France took the same position before the revolution in regard to what they called their rights. But was it not their lives which caused the revolution? The nobles amused themselves in luxury and wealth while the people starved. WHO WERE THE ANARCHISTS? THE PEOPLE OR THEY?

I recall a few years ago, during the period of depression, when thousands of men were without work, a meeting of workingmen in Tompkins square, New York city. Four platforms had been built, and from each of them speakers were addressing the people on the rights of labor and suggesting methods for obtaining work for the unemployed. The audience crowded the square.

Suddenly a squad of policemen entered the square. They clubbed men, women and children indiscriminately. No attempt was made to arrest anybody because no law had been violated.

Now, suppose you had been clubbed just because you had been standing in the square listening to one of the speakers. On your way to the hospital to have your wounds dressed do you think that you could have been very ecstatic about the present government?

Anarchy is madness. Its theories are subversive of law and order. In practice they lead to murder and plunder, and no right thinking man can advocate them.

If we look back to the time following the assassination of President McKinley and the hectic excitement which prevailed then, we must confess that if ever anarchistic tendencies were expressed it was then.

One man—and he wore the garb that indicates the messenger of the Prince of Peace—even suggested that at the execution of Czolgosz all the power houses of the United States should be connected with the electric chair in order to make the execution a popular one.

IN OUR EFFORTS TO DEVISE LEGISLATION FOR REPRESSING ANARCHY THERE IS GRAVE DANGER THAT WE MAY GO TO THE OTHER EXTREME.

You cannot extirpate ideas by legislation. Laws never made men and women virtuous. Do not endeavor to repress an idea. If the idea is right, it will triumph, and the repressive methods will prove only so much fuel to feed the flame. When wrong, ideas die of themselves. IN DEALING WITH ANARCHY LET US REMEMBER THAT IF OUR GOVERNMENT IS FOUNDED ON RIGHTEOUSNESS THEN ANARCHY IS A CRAZE AND THIS CRAZE WILL PASS AS OTHER CRAZES HAVE IN THE WORLD'S HISTORY.

CONTROL RAILROADS

THE INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION.

Various Recommendations Made In Behalf of Agriculturalists, One Being Extension of Rural Free Delivery—Final Report to Congress.

Washington, Feb. 7.—The industrial commission has submitted its final report to congress. It is a document of more than 1,000 printed pages. The first part, which has been made public, deals with the progress of the nation, agriculture, mining and transportation.

Recommendations are made on the subjects of transportation and agriculture. The commission advises as to transportation as follows in part:

"That the policy of governmental supervision and control of railroads, as originally laid down in the senate committee report of 1886 and embodied the following year in the interstate commerce act, be revived and strengthened; that the authority of the interstate commerce commission, necessary for the adequate protection of shippers and clearly intended by the framers of the law, be restored, and that the powers and functions of the commission be enlarged practically as contemplated in the so-called Cullom bill of 1900, except as to authority to prepare and enforce a uniform classification."

Agricultural Department Praised.

Prefacing its recommendations regarding agriculture, the commission says that agriculture has derived more benefit from the establishment of the department of agriculture and from its administrative work than from any other federal legislation.

It makes the following recommendations on this subject:

"That the secretary of agriculture be given authority—

"To inspect dairy products intended for export and to certify to their grade and quality.

"To fix standard grades for cereals, based on season of growing, quality and weight per measure, and, when intended for export, to inspect and certify the same.

"To cause stock cars and stock yards to be cleaned and disinfected whenever he considers such action necessary.

"To make adequate regulations prohibiting the shipment of uninspected or dressed meat from one state to another or to foreign countries.

"To require and direct the proper disposition of diseased meat.

"That a more comprehensive penalty clause for shipping diseased meat be enacted.

"That a law be enacted to provide—

"For the inspection of nursery stock intended for interstate commerce or for export and prohibiting the transportation of diseased, infested or uninspected nursery stock, and for rules and regulations to govern the importation of nursery stock and fruit, and prohibiting the importation of diseased, infested, or uninspected nursery stock or fruit.

To Prevent Adulteration of Foods.

"That a pure food section in the chemistry division of the department of agriculture be established to prevent the adulteration, false branding and deceptive imitation of foods, beverages, candies, drugs and condiments in the District of Columbia and the territories, and for regulating interstate traffic therefor.

"That adequate legislation be enacted by the several states where needed to control such diseases as glanders, tuberculosis, etc.

"That whatever changes may be made by the tariff, by reciprocity or otherwise, adequate protection to the beet sugar industry be maintained.

"That increased appropriations be made by the congress for building sample stretches of improved roads in various sections of the country, so as to encourage the more rapid construction of such roads at state and local expense.

"That the system of free rural delivery be extended as commended by the postmaster general in his latest annual report.

"That the policy of setting aside forest preserves already inaugurated be extended and that the three bureaus of the government which have charge of the investigations and administrative work connected with forestry be consolidated."

Heated Discussion In Senate.

Washington, Feb. 7.—For four hours yesterday the senate had the Philippine tariff bill under discussion. The measure was completed, so far as the Philippine committee is concerned, all of the committee amendments being adopted. Several other amendments, however, will be offered, one or two being pending.

Toward the close of the session the discussion became heated. In response to a resolution offered several days ago by Mr. Rawlins, of Utah, the secretary of war transmitted to the senate the sedition laws enacted by the Philippine commission. They were read in full and immediately drew the fire of the opponents of the government's Philippine policy. Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts, expressed his astonishment that such laws should be enforced by the government authorities.

Mr. Foraker, of Ohio, had read from the revised statutes of the United States the laws of congress relating to the crime of treason and similar offenses against the government and said the acts passed by the Philippine commission were almost identical in their language as those enacted by congress in the days of the fathers of the republic and that there was nothing unprecedented or unusual about them.

The Ohio senator was interrupted continually and had several warm colloquies with senators who were opposing him. In one of them he announced with great earnestness that the American army never would return from the Philippines until it returned victorious, and that gentlemen, in and out of congress, rail about it as they might, ought to thoroughly understand that fact.

In conclusion of the debate Mr. Hoar poured oil on the troubled waters of the senate, maintaining that men might well differ on any of the great questions now before the country, but that all were thoroughly loyal to the country and were doing their duty as they saw it.

Early in the day Mr. Scott, of West Virginia, delivered a speech, in which he advocated an investigation of the San Blas route for an isthmian canal, and Mr. Hansbrough made a carefully prepared address on his bill to provide a national system of irrigation of arid lands.

Portion of Taft's Testimony.

Washington, Feb. 7.—In continuing his testimony before the senate committee on the Philippines, Governor Taft said in part:

Taking up the subject of general taxation he said the commission is making an effort to make the customs tariff the only source of revenue, "and while," he said, "we should be glad to have free trade with the United States in order to insure the progress of agriculture, we cannot but feel that if it is fair to collect a tariff on goods coming into the Philippines from the United States it is only fair to provide for a tariff on Philippine articles coming into the United States.

"In our judgment the customs tax is absolutely necessary, as the government could not be supported by direct taxation. Of course, if there were no customs collection on goods coming from the United States, the effect would be to nullify all tariff collections, as practically all the importations into the Philippines would be from the United States or from Spain, which would also be given free trade under the peace treaty."

He said that the tariff adopted by the commission is a specific duty, amounting to from 15 to 30 per cent. reduced to an ad valorem system, and that the effort had been to place the higher tariff on luxuries and the lower on necessities, thus reversing the Spanish system.

Refunding of Porto Ricon Duties.

Washington, Feb. 7.—Mr. Tracewell, the comptroller of the treasury, has rendered a decision involving the question of the refunding of duties on goods imported from Porto Rico. The decision is given at the request of the secretary of the treasury, who asked as to his authority to refund moneys paid as duties, or as a fine equal to the duty, no protest having been filed against the assessment of these duties, on certain merchandise brought into this country from Porto Rico, after the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain and before the taking effect of the act of April 12, 1900.

The comptroller holds in effect that where no protests have been filed no duties can be refunded on goods imported from Porto Rico between April 11, 1899, and May 1, 1900. All applications for the refunding of duties where no protests have been filed must be sent to the secretary of the treasury for certification to congress for appropriation.

To Bar Competition of Marine Band.

Washington, Feb. 7.—The house committee on labor yesterday reported favorably the bill of Representative Bartholdt, of Missouri, to prevent the United States Marine band and other army and navy bands from competing with civilian bands or individuals. Mr. Bartholdt says in his report that the members of the army and navy bands are under the pay of the government; their subsistence is provided for by the government; their uniforms and instruments and all the necessary sheet music and other paraphernalia are paid for out of the national treasury, all of which affords them a considerable advantage and easily enables them to underbid citizen musicians on all occasions where music is to be furnished under contract. He points out that this bill will not interfere with the playing of the Marine band at the White House or on all governmental occasions.

Rapid Progress Made on Bill.

Washington, Feb. 7.—The house spent the day on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill. Very rapid progress was made, 74 of the 130 pages of the bill being disposed of before adjournment. No debate of importance developed during the consideration of the bill and no amendments of importance were adopted.

Correspondence Sent to Senate.

Washington, Feb. 7.—The official correspondence relating to the tariff matters in the Philippines called for by the senate was sent to that body yesterday by the war department. The correspondence is very voluminous and includes all the numerous reports and documents which have been made public by the war department for the last two years.

MISS HELEN HAY A BRIDE.

United in Marriage to Payne Whitney—Revs. Hamlin and Hayden Officiated.

Washington, Feb. 7.—Miss Helen Hay and Payne Whitney were married at noon yesterday in the Church of the Covenant, the Rev. T. F. Hamlin, pastor of the church, and the Rev. H. C. Hayden, of Cleveland, officiating.

The ceremony was witnessed by President Roosevelt, the diplomatic corps, representatives of the army and navy in the full dress of their ranks, and hundreds of distinguished members of society in the national capital and other cities. Members of congress, the judiciary and nearly all the high officials of the government in Washington were present.

The decorations of the church were of white lillies and roses, vines and palms. Ropes of roses surrounded the section occupied by the presidential party and the aisles likewise were garlanded with floral strands.

The bride being in mourning for her brother Adelbert, her gown was of plain white satin en train, a veil of tulle, caught with a spray of orange blossoms, falling to the hem. She wore neither lace nor jewels. Her maids, Misses Alice Hay and Dorothy Whitney, were gowned in pale gray crepe de chine over white taffeta and wore picture hats of white felt, with ostrich plumes. They carried white roses. Mr. Whitney was attended by Eugene Hale, Jr., while the ushers were Henry Clews, Jr., Fred Kernochan, J. N. Waterbury, M. S. Berger and Governor Morris, all of New York city; James N. Wadsworth, Jr., of Genesco, N. Y.; H. P. Scott, of Philadelphia, and Major Charles McCawley.

The following selections were played on the organ during the service: Pilgrim chorus, "The Evening Star," Tanhauser; processional march of the Master Singers, "The Prize Song," Die Meistersinger; "Wedding March," Dudley Buck; "The Swan Song," Elsa entering the cathedral; introduction to third act and wedding music, Lohengrin; march from "Midsummer's Night Dream," Mendelssohn.

After the ceremony a breakfast was served at the residence of Secretary and Mrs. Hay, at which only the immediate relatives and friends of the families of the bride and groom were present, with the exception of President and Mrs. Roosevelt. President Roosevelt toasted the bride at the breakfast. The room was elaborately decorated with white roses, as was every room in the house open to the guests.

Among the gifts to the bride was a diamond and pearl necklace from Colonel Oliver Payne, uncle of the groom. Colonel Payne also presented the couple with a fine residence near his own in Fifth avenue, New York, and a country house at Tuxedo.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitney will be the guests of Colonel Payne at Thomasville, Ga., for a month. Then after a visit of a few weeks at the home of the bride's parents they will go to Europe for the summer. Returning in the fall they will make their home in New York.

A HUNDRED CONVERSIONS

The Result of M. E. Revival Services to Date—Praise Service Tonight.

Services at the M. E. church were well attended again last night. Dr. Crawford took as his subject, "The Power of God's Word." He said in part:

"In the scriptures the word of God is illustrated in various ways to indicate its power over human hearts. There is something in it which brings its own evidence. This word is powerful in the day of its first utterance, is still mighty in discovering to us the secrets of the human heart. It shows us our needs and reveals to us the remedy for that need—Jesus Christ."

Tonight there will be special praise service at the M. E. church. Dr. Crawford will preach a short sermon and Prof. and Mrs. Phillis will provide special music. The meeting will take on the character of a praise and thanksgiving service. Since the beginning of the meetings there have been about 100 conversions and many have joined the church.

A HUNDRED CONVERSIONS

Services at the M. E. church were well attended again last night. Dr. Crawford took as his subject, "The Power of God's Word." He said in part:

"In the scriptures the word of God is illustrated in various ways to indicate its power over human hearts. There is something in it which brings its own evidence. This word is powerful in the day of its first utterance, is still mighty in discovering to us the secrets of the human heart. It shows us our needs and reveals to us the remedy for that need—Jesus Christ."

Tonight there will be special praise service at the M. E. church. Dr. Crawford will preach a short sermon and Prof. and Mrs. Phillis will provide special music. The meeting will take on the character of a praise and thanksgiving service. Since the beginning of the meetings there have been about 100 conversions and many have joined the church.

MRS. SOFFEL WORSE

The Prompt Administering of Stimulants Prevented a Collapse.

COMPLICATING DISEASE FEARED.

Dr. McAdoo Thought There Was Grave Danger of Low Grade of Fever or Tuberculosis — Richard Scandrett Consents to Be Attorney.

Butler, Pa., Feb. 7.—Mrs. Kate Soffel was yesterday nearer death than at any other time since being taken to the Butler county hospital.

For several hours her condition was grave, but by prompt medical attention and the heroic administration of stimulants a collapse was prevented. Last night she was sleeping rather fitfully under the influence of opiates and was said to have shown some improvement, but the danger had not by any means passed.

One of the chief factors in reviving the patient's drooping spirits was the visit yesterday afternoon of her sister, Mrs. Jacob Miller, of Pittsburg, who brought a cheering message of some kind. Mrs. Miller also told Mrs. Soffel that Attorney Richard B. Scandrett, of Pittsburg, has consented to become her legal adviser. The hospital attendants said last night that Mr. Scandrett is expected here today and they will have the prisoner in readiness for his coming. Assistant District Attorney John S. Robb, Jr., is also expected.

Dr. George K. McAdoo last night thought her convalescence will be prolonged, and that there is grave danger of complicating disease, such as a low grade of fever or tuberculosis.

One of the developments of yesterday in Mrs. Soffel's condition was the peeling off of the skin on her arms and limbs, due to a frost-bitten condition of her body.

DIRECT EVIDENCE ADMITTED.

Court Decides That No Testimony That Does Not Affect Harris Can Go In the Libel Suit.

Clearfield, Pa., Feb. 7.—The Harris-Meek case went to trial yesterday morning.

Judge Gordon, after a long and interesting legal battle, ruled that no testimony could be admitted which does not directly connect Harris with the alleged corruption of the last legislature, either as receiving money or other valuable thing for his vote or influence as a member.

Notwithstanding the ruling of Judge Gordon, the defense got a vast amount of damaging allegations to the jury. The opening address of ex-Judge Krebs was a complete recital of alleged fraud and corruption attending the organization and the election of Quay, the passage of the Pittsburg and Philadelphia "rippers," the fifth court and the franchises.

FLAT BUILDING DESTROYED.

Tenants Escaped—Two Firemen and Policeman Injured.

Chicago, Feb. 7.—The 'Varsity flat building, situated at the southeast corner of Sixtieth street and Ellis avenue, and near the Chicago university buildings, was destroyed by fire last evening, entailing an aggregate loss upon the owner of the structure and the tenants of $160,000.

During the fire an explosion of gasoline in a grocery store, located in the building, hurled Fireman James Tillman from the fire escape on the second story to the ground, breaking his thigh and injuring him internally. Robert Hartley, another fireman, was thrown from a window in the second story and his head was badly cut. He was also badly burned by the explosion. Policeman John Coale, who was in the grocery at the time of the explosion, was thrown down and badly burned about the face.

The tenants all got out safely.

PROMINENT GUESTS AT DINNER FOR THE SCHWABS.

London, Feb. 7.—Joseph Lawrence, M. P., and Archibald W. Maconochie, M. P., entertained Charles M. Schwab, president of the United States Steel corporation, and Mrs. Schwab at dinner at the house of commons last night. The guests included Mr. Chamberlain, the colonial secretary; Lord Kelvin, president of the Royal society, Edinburgh; Sir Thomas Lipton, Sir Edward H. Carson, solicitor general; Colonel Hunsicker, chairman of the Nickel corporation, and Mrs. Hunsicker; John Fletcher Moulton, M. P., and Arthur Keen, chairman of the Dowlais Iron, Steel and Coal company.

Making It Easier to Bear.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkin, "do the baby's cries annoy you?"

"Terribly."

"Well, I'll tell you what to do: Make believe baby is at a game of baseball and has just seen a home run."—Exchange.

AN EXCESS OF ANIMATION

In the Stock Market, Thursday—Dealings Better Distributed Than For Some Time Past.

New York, Feb. 7.—The stock market showed considerable excess of animation Thursday and the dealings were much better distributed than for some time past. There were stocks which hung back and some which fell away on profit taking after recent considerable advances, but the general tone of the market was strong and speculative sentiment seemed much more confident. There was a feeling that the improved conditions were due to some development not generally known, and the professional traders, who, in fact, did not know what they were, were among the largest buyers on the supposition that others who did know were in the market with them. These surmises had to do to a large extent with possible developments in the suit against the Northern Securities company. Confident expressions were heard, but on anonymous authority, that the decision of the supreme court was made up against the admission of the suit to argument. The supposition also found expression that the projectors of the great merger have an alternative plan to fall back on in case of the declared illegality of the present company. It was argued that a foreign corporation might hold the securities of United States corporations and be outside the jurisdiction of the United States laws. Of the day's movements in detail, Southern Pacific was largely in the hands of the same speculative interest which has been dealing in it recently, and the movement in Pennsylvania was also attributed to this operator. The Vanderbilts, as a group, were all strong, and the Toledo, St. Louis and Western stocks moved in sympathy with the group on rumored absorption in the Vanderbilt interest. The gains in these stocks reached up to 6 points, Lake Erie and Western preferred showing the latter figure. Illinois Central was also strong on the general consideration of its price level as compared with other equal dividend payers. There were a number of lower priced and less prominent stocks whose special strength was attributed to increasing dividend prospects. Profit taking made the closing somewhat irregular, but the inroads upon prices were not extensive.

The bond market was active and broad and showed general advances. Total sales, par value, $4,055,000.

U. S. 3s declined ¼ per cent on the last call.

RODE FOURTEEN MILES IN THE LOCOMOTIVE CAB.

Akron, O., Feb. 7.—The nine passengers, on an eastbound Northern Ohio railroad train arrived in Akron on the engine of the train. The heavy drifts on the road caused a coupling to heat and at the conductor's suggestion the passengers, including both men and women, completed the trip to Akron in the locomotive. The engineer allowed the women to blow the whistle and ring the bell, during the ride of 14 miles.

Another Victim of Explosion.

New York, Feb. 7.—The coroner's office was notified of the death from shock of Edward C. Fiedler, of this city, at the Murray Hill hotel. Mr. Fiedler occupied a room on the third floor of the Murray Hill hotel on Jan. 27, at the time of the subway explosion. He was then convalescent from a long illness, and after the explosion suffered considerably from shock.

Rev. Dr. Baum Dead.

Philadelphia, Feb. 7.—The Rev. William Baum, D. D., pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran church, died at his home here of a complication of diseases, aged 77 years. Dr. Baum was for many years president of the Northern Home for Friendless Children, a trustee of the Pennsylvania college and a director of the theological seminary at Gettysburg.

Voices to Order.

A knowledge of the physiology of the human larynx has made it possible to supply artificial voices to persons who have been deprived of the one nature gave them, and a number of cases exist where the cavity has been opened and a larynx made of suitable material with rubber membranes has been inserted and become practically useful in speech.

Heavenly.

"Say," the girl's father called from above stairs, "this is an unearthly hour for that young man to be here, Mary!"

"You're right," responded the young man, who had just been accepted; "the hour is unearthly, sure enough; it's simply heavenly!"—Philadelphia Record.

Absolutely Original.

"Ah," said the great singer, "I have hit on a plan which will indeed bring me distinction."

"What it is?" asked a friend.

"I shall make a farewell tour, and—I shall not go back."—Answers.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who is regarded by one section of the British press as the greatest English speaking actress and by another section as a very commonplace player, has been appearing before large audiences at the Theater Republic in this city. She has created the impression that her home folks have not yet correctly estimated her ability. She is by no means the greatest English speaking actress, even in the class of roles with which she has chosen to identify herself. At the same time she is not commonplace and couldn't be if she tried.

"Magda" is a great favorite with Mrs. Campbell, just as it is with all actresses of her type. There is in the titular role so much opportunity for the display of varying emotions that it is doubtless one of the best vehicles extant for the exploitation of any actress capable of satisfactorily portraying passion.

Aside from the manifest technical defects of Mrs. Campbell's method, it may be said that her wonderful animalism, her exuberant vitality, give an impression which a close analysis will not entirely justify. The difficulty of accurately gauging her qualifications as an actress is also heightened by the fact that she is a very beautiful woman, with as glorious a pair of eyes as were ever put into the head of mortal. That she will prove an enormous money maker for her managers, at least on this her first visit to America, is a foregone conclusion. Whether she will do so well on her next tour, however, is open to serious doubt.

No one, I think, will have the temerity to assert that Mrs. Campbell is not an excellent actress, and if she had come to us as the leading woman of some well known star it is not at all unlikely that many of the critics of this city would have pronounced her a better player than her principal, for, take it all in all, she is a greater artist than any recent English importation. By comparison with the ox eyed Nethersole, she is a veritable Duse in repression, a veritable whirlwind of passion. And yet Mrs. Campbell is at times almost crude in her exposition of passion, while of true repression she possesses not a tittle unless we choose to regard as repression her quietness of method in the lighter scenes.

Mrs. Campbell, I am convinced, would be really great in a play written especially for her by a conscientious author thoroughly familiar with her limitations as well as with her strong points and who was not afraid to openly take cognizance of the latter. But it is doubtful that such a dramatist exists, and if there be such a one it is not likely that an ambitious star would give him a commission for a play confessedly designed to be of a caliber which would not require the best efforts of at least a Bernhardt or a Duse.

In portions of that great "trial" play, "Magda," Mrs. Campbell is delightful, and it would be a difficult matter to name an actress capable of better work, but when the real test comes, when the deep conflicting emotions which must sway a woman of Magda's temperament in the situation in which she finds herself are to be shown, the English actress is wanting. Withal, however, she is pleasing even where she is least artistic, for Mrs. Campbell is one of those performers who never offend by venturing far afield from what they realize to be their vantage ground. When she gets to a scene which she must know is far beyond her strength, Mrs. Campbell simply pitches it in a key which, while somewhat below that in which it is written and somewhat above that in which she shows her best work, is at least a happy compromise between art and capability.

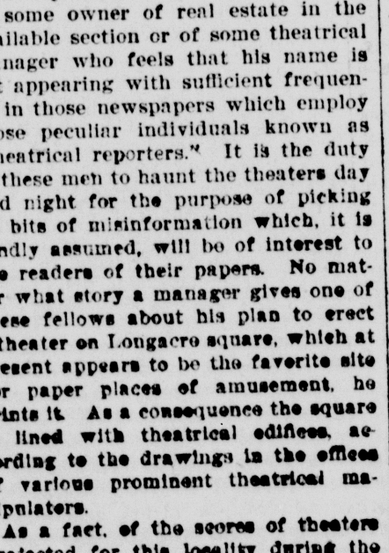

This is the critical, perhaps it may be said the hypercritical, view of Mrs. Patrick Campbell's quality as an actress. She will, as I have already said, please the average theater goer, but when the price of the best seats is put at $3 each it is an intimation that the star is regarded by herself and her exploiters as of the first magnitude and carries with it a tacit invitation to criticise her work from that standpoint.

Of Mrs. Campbell's company little need be said. On the whole, its work was satisfactory, although there were one or two woefully weak spots. Herbert Waring, who in London is regarded as an excellent actor, gave a performance of the one rascally character in "Magda" which would have won him undying fame if it had been done in comic opera.

This is the season when each week sees three or four New York theaters built—on paper. The funny part of it is that all of the houses are usually slated to occupy the same site. One is inevitably forced to the conclusion that some genius has invented a plan for erecting one building upon another, but that isn't the case. It is merely a bit of presswork upon the part either of some owner of real estate in the available section or of some theatrical manager who feels that his name is not appearing with sufficient frequency in those newspapers which employ those peculiar individuals known as "theatrical reporters." It is the duty of these men to haunt the theaters day and night for the purpose of picking up bits of misinformation which, it is fondly assumed, will be of interest to the readers of their papers. No matter what story a manager gives one of these fellows about his plan to erect a theater on Longacre square, which at present appears to be the favorite site for paper places of amusement, he prints it. As a consequence the square is lined with theatrical edifices, according to the drawings in the offices of various prominent theatrical manipulators.

As a fact, of the scores of theaters projected for this locality during the past couple of years, not one has progressed to the point of having a single shovelful of dirt for the cellar removed.

At last, however, we are really to have a new first class theater, for the announcement is made by Hyde & Behman, the Brooklyn managers, who have enough money to build a good many playhouses and who besides care nothing for the factitious advertising to be derived from bombastic announcements of impossibilities. Hyde & Behman, furthermore, will not build on Longacre square, preferring to remain at Herald square, in whose future as a theatrical center they have long had confidence, as evidenced by their erecting many years ago at the corner of Thirty-fifth street and Broadway the old Park theater, now known as the Herald Square. This house they still own.

Oscar Hammerstein, who has just leased his Republic theater for a term of years to David Belasco and who has a habit of actually building the theaters he announces, will transfer the scene of his architectural activities to Philadelphia. He promises to give the City of Brotherly Love a playhouse the like of which it has never seen; but, as Oscar is prone to make promises of that sort, perhaps it is best not to take him too seriously. Instead we may admit that he is responsible for some pretty good theaters and let it go at that.

And, by the way, the lease of the Theater Republic by David Belasco is apt to have an important bearing upon the drama in this city. Mr. Belasco is by no means a great dramatist, but that he is a great dramatic carpenter no one can deny. It is said to be his intention to devote the Republic primarily to his three stars, Mrs. Leslie Carter, David Warfield and Blanche Bates. He will tear out the monstrously ugly and almost ludicrously inconvenient front of the building and in the interior will make a number of important changes designed to add to the comfort and convenience of patrons. Any sort of modification in these directions will be appreciated by theater goers, for it would be difficult to find anywhere a playhouse of first class pretensions which is more uncomfortable to the people who make its continued existence possible than the Republic in its present form.

It is not to be expected that Mr. Belasco's advent into the ranks of theatrical managers will make for the elevation of the drama or even for the exploitation of its highest types. If he writes his own plays, they must of necessity be artificial, but Belasco has the unusual faculty of making his artificiality so attractive that to the casual auditor it seems almost real. Besides, he has ideas and the courage to give them a trial, and in these days of slavish "follow your leader" methods anything that holds out promise of individuality should be encouraged.

How to Get Strong And Stay Strong

By EUGEN SANDOW, the Famous Strong Man

I NEVER touch drugs, and I never diet. To be strong does not mean that you must forego the common pleasures of life taken in moderation. On the contrary, I always enjoy them. THE SECRET IS EXERCISE—INTELLIGENT, CONSTANT EXERCISE. To know every muscle of the 363 or more and to develop them to the fullest capacity—this will overcome any physical ill. We have all of us our limitations, but we too often think we have reached them.

I would apply the same principle to the training of men of advanced years as I would to those in early prime, but perhaps not the same method. If a man finds at sixty that he is weak, he need only go to work to make himself strong, just like one half his years, but, of course, intelligently and from his own standpoint. I have had pupils of eighty years of age and built them up astonishingly.

Oh, it is never too late—never while there is life and will power. Cato learned Greek at eighty, did he not? And the late queen of England mastered Hindoostanee in her seventy-fifth year, I believe. Age has nothing to do with progress if the enthusiasm and will power are still there.

It is my ambition to revitalize the youth of this generation and make them physically fit for the highest duties. I have been at work in London for some years to this end preparing soldiers for the frontier and firemen for the crowded city.

Last September I gave gold, silver and bronze statuettes valued at 1,000 guineas for students of physical culture who showed the best results under my system. There were 150 competitors, and THE FIRST PRIZE WINNER WAS A POOR CLERK FROM NOTTINGHAM WHO EIGHTEEN MONTHS BEFORE WAS ORDERED TO GET OUT OF ENGLAND TO SAVE HIMSELF FROM THE RAVAGES OF CONSUMPTION. That man has every right to live to be a hundred years old, and every day of his life he will be in glorious physical health if he takes care of himself. That's what I would wish every young man in America to do. It is only a question of the mind—the mind, understand. The muscles will obey when the brain leads, never fear. Be patient and constant in exercise.

THE MAN WHO WOULD KEEP WELL MUST ACCUSTOM HIMSELF TO DAILY COLD SPONGE BATHS.

There is nothing more invigorating. It will create a proper appetite, not a false one. I eat little and often. It is folly to attempt to live on two meals a day, for one is sure to overeat—the great trouble with Americans. Your lunch system here is atrocious. It produces dyspeptics and makes men prematurely old. To eat six times a day and a little each time is better than one overwhelming meal.

Not a Sensible Man.

Daughter—Oh, mamma, I do wish I were pretty!

Mother—You needn't, dear. Sensible men think very little about beauty.

Daughter—But it isn't sensible men I'm thinking about, mamma; it's Charlie!

W., portrait or signature which is borne on every box of the genuine—the kind referred to by Mrs. George Hall, of No. 389 West Market street, East Liverpool, O., who says: "I was bilious, my head ached hard and constantly. There was a general feeling of weakness and depression. I was asked to use Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills, and did so getting them at Larkins' drug store, corner Sixth and East Market streets. The result was very good indeed, as the biliousness was overcome, the headaches cured and bodily and nerve strength furnished. Dr. A. W. King Edward's announced determination to personally enter the horse racing arena next season has caused a pronounced interest in forthcoming English events. The American owners who are to speed their steeds on British tracks during the summer are resolved that Edward shall not monopolize the winning of stakes and have decided to put forth their strongest efforts to pluck the Derby and other big events from the sovereign's reach.

The racing duel between the American millionaires and England's king will be watched eagerly on both sides of the Atlantic. With the stables of James R. and Foxhall Keene, William C. Whitney, William K. Vanderbilt and Richard Croker on the "tight little isle" we shall not be at all anxious as to the outcome. These men possess some of the fastest pieces of horseflesh that ever faced a starter, and a repetition of last year's victories is confidently expected by Uncle Sam.

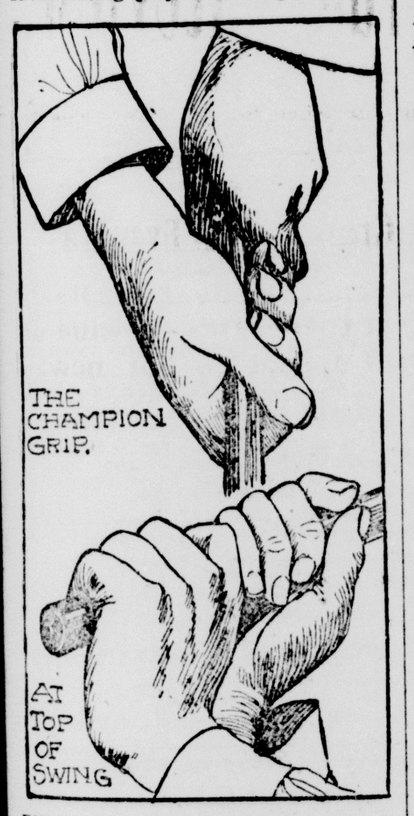

Lord Marcus Beresford, the London horse dealer and brother of Lord William Beresford, will be the active manager of the royal stable. Danny Maher will have the most important mounts.

Mr. Keene's strong stable consists of Conroy, winner as a three-year-old of the Brooklyn Handicap; Cap and Bells, who took the English Oaks; Chacornac, winner of the Futurity of 1898; Olympian, second in the latter event; Cheviro, winner of the Pendergast Stakes; Noonday, Kearsarge and other speedy horses

The top liners in Mr. Whitney's stable are Kilmarnock, Volodyovski and Nasturtium, and the leaders Mr. Croker now has in England are Minnie Dee, Dobbins, Americus and Rhoda B.

The most dangerous rivals of the British sovereign will be Mr. Keene and Mr. Whitney, who will also have a warm war between themselves for the best stakes offered on the English turf.

Different methods of holding golf sticks during play have long been the causes of discussion and disagreement in the world of drives and lofts. A proper grip is the first thing that a beginner should be taught, and on his success in this line depends his future triumph or failure. Almost every player differs from his associates in regard to grip, and consequently opinions are constantly clashing.

HOW JAMES BRAID HOLDS HIS GOLF STICKS.

James Braid, the present champion of Great Britain, is undoubtedly the greatest living player of golf. He uses a grip which, he claims, is largely responsible for his victories and says that it has been particularly helpful in driving. Braid is probably the strongest and surest driver in the British isles, and it is doubtful if America will ever produce his equal in this respect.

Ted Blackwell, the amateur of St. Andrews, is Braid's most formidable driving rival in the kingdom. Blackwell's drives, however, while unusually long, are often wild and uncertain. As a steady driver Harry Vardon is perhaps second to Braid.

The three greatest golfers of the present period—Braid, Vardon and Taylor—all have their exclusive characteristics. While, as already stated, Braid's strength lies in his drive, Vardon's forte is general all around play and an ability to pull himself out of difficulties at critical moments. Taylor is particularly remarkable for his mashie shots in approaches.

The American Derby.

The American Derby, which is to be run in Chicago, will have $20,000 added money this year, and no changes will be made in the conditions. There are no reduced forfeits. By this scheme the Derby will be worth about $25,000 gross and $20,000 to the winner. The second horse will receive $3,000 and the third horse $2,000.

Filipino Independence Is Inevitable

By JACOB GOULD SCHURMAN, Ex-President of the Philippine Commission Appointed by the Late President McKinley

IT seems to me that the highest act open to constructive statesmanship in America today is to conceive and formulate a wise Philippine policy—a policy which shall be true to the principles of our republic, accordant with the facts of the situation, definitive and permanent in its character and therefore fitted to shape and color all legislation requisite.

THE DAY OF IGNORANT AND ENTHUSIASTIC RANTING ON THE ONE HAND AND ON THE OTHER OF INERTIA AND DRIFT, OF UNCERTAIN COURSES, OF TEMPORARY EXPEDIENTS, HAS GONE BY. THE TIME APPROACHES TO SET OUR PHILIPPINE COMPASS BY THE FIXED STARS.

I take as my starting point the motives and objects with which we went into the Philippines. They were impressively voiced by President McKinley, and he set them forth to me three years ago. OUR PURPOSE WAS NOT SELFISH, IT WAS HUMANITARIAN; IT WAS NOT THE VANITY OF SELF AGGRANDIZEMENT, IT WAS NOT THE GREED OF POWER AND DOMINION, BUT ALTRUISM CARING FOR THE HAPPINESS OF OTHERS, PHILANTHROPY RELIEVING THE FILIPINOS OF OPPRESSION AND CONFERRING ON THEM THE BLESSINGS OF LIBERTY. I am, of course, aware that other and less worthy aims appealed to individual Americans and to groups of Americans. Yet it was the humanitarian object of liberating the Filipinos from Spanish tyranny and bestowing upon them the boon of freedom that decided the president and people of the United States to compel Spain to cede to us her sovereignty over the Philippine Islands. IF OUR PRESENCE IN THE PHILIPPINES BE NOT JUSTIFIED IN ITS PURPOSE AND INTENT, THEN OUR SOLDIERS' BLOOD IS ON OUR HANDS—AYE, AND ALL THE BLOOD, IN THAT CASE INNOCENT, OF THE FILIPINOS WE HAVE FOUGHT, the misery we have caused their families and the devastation we have wrought in their homes. But I assert that to confer a blessing was the final cause of our acceptance from Spain of sovereignty over the Philippines. Nothing has happened since to alter our purpose. On this fundamental point President Roosevelt, who is not less explicit than President McKinley, has said: "We hope to do for them what has never before been done for any people of the tropics—to make them fit for self government after the fashion of the really free nations."

What does this mean but that the Filipinos are to be taught to govern themselves as Americans or Englishmen govern themselves? And is it necessary to observe that progressive liberty must from the nature of the case issue in sovereign independence?

AND I SAY THAT CONSUMMATION IS INFINITELY TO BE PREFERRED TO THEIR INCORPORATION INTO THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AS A STATE OR EVEN AS A TERRITORY.

I am sure it is the policy of the American people to admit no Asiatic country to the status and privileges of a state or territory in this republic of the United States of America. THUS, IF YOU LOOK BEYOND THE PRESENT AND THE NEAR FUTURE, YOU DESCRY IN THE DIM DISTANCE AN INDEPENDENT AND SOVEREIGN PHILIPPINE REPUBLIC.

I say you will never consent to make the Philippine Islands an integral and organic part of the United States of America. The objections to the plan are insuperable, the reasons against it invincible, the hostility to it ingrained and ineradicable. Very well, what then? A colony, a dependency? For a time this status may suffice; as a permanent arrangement it is impossible. The Filipinos have condensed the experience of centuries into these last half dozen years. They have dreamed of liberty, they have fought for liberty, they have seen in the east the star of independence.

The American people have always sympathized with "the aspirations of nationalities after freedom and independence." And when representative institutions have been conferred upon the Filipinos, if the people, through their regularly constituted spokesmen—which Luna, Malvar and Lukban never were—petition for freedom and independence and show that they are capable of maintaining law and order and discharging their international obligations, can it be doubted that the American people would grant such a petition?

THE MISTAKE OF AGUINALDO AND THE INSURGENTS (SO FAR AS THEY WERE NOT MERE BRIGANDS AND ROBBERS) WAS IN APPROACHING THE UNITED STATES WITH RIFLES INSTEAD OF PETITIONS.

From the American point of view Philippine independence is inevitable, and from the American point of view Philippine independence is a consummation devoutly to be wished.

ANY DECENT KIND OF GOVERNMENT OF THE FILIPINOS BY THE FILIPINOS IS BETTER THAN THE BEST POSSIBLE GOVERNMENT OF FILIPINOS BY AMERICANS.

For that reason I am anxious to see congress grant the Filipinos representative institutions at once. With such powers, ideas and sentiments as they have, get them in harness quickly, and let them tug and sweat under the burden of national affairs. This is the way men are trained in government. If the Filipinos are to learn to govern themselves, the sooner they get at it the better.

In 1899 I did not venture to make the period of waiting shorter than one generation owing to the lack of homogeneity, union and intercourse among the diverse peoples of these islands and the want of experience by the natives in government during three centuries of Spanish dominion. This consciousness of nationality, however, is today so manifest and powerful that General Chaffee is reported to have declared that the natives of these islands are all traitors to American sovereignty, all have their hearts set on independence. Then we have the testimony of Governor Taft that the native officials have proved reasonably capable in the administration of public affairs. The United States is the last people in the world to reason any other people into political subjection. And against a whole nation aspiring and struggling to be independent it is as impossible today to draw up an indictment as it was when Burke repudiated the task in connection with the people of the thirteen American colonies.

NATURE'S ICEHOUSE.

Food For Birds That Is Preserved In the Arctic Regions.

The number of birds that go to the arctic regions to breed is vast beyond conception. They go not by thousands, but by tens and hundreds of thousands, and because nowhere else in the world does nature provide at the same time and in the same place such a lavish prodigality of food.

The vegetation consists of cranberry, cloudberry and crowberry bushes, and these, forced by the perpetual sunshine of the arctic summer, bear enormous crops of fruit. But the crop is not ripe until the middle and end of the arctic summer, and if the fruit eating birds had to wait until it was ripe they would starve in the meantime, so they arrive on the very day of the melting of the snow.

But each year the snow descends on an immense crop of ripe fruit before the birds have time to gather it. It is thus preserved perfectly fresh and pure, and the melting of the snow discloses the bushes, with the unconsumed last year's crop hanging on them or lying, ready to be eaten, on the ground.

The frozen meal stretches across the breadth of northern Asia. It never decays and is accessible the moment the snow melts. The same heat which thaws the fruit brings into being the most prolific insect life in the world—the mosquito swarms on the tundra. No European can live there without a veil after the snow melts. The gun barrels are black with them, and clouds of them often obscure the sight.

Thus the insect eating birds have only to open their mouths to fill them with mosquitoes, and thus the presence of swarms of cliff chaffs, pipis and the wagtails in this arctic region is accounted for.—Pearson's.

Human Traits In Birds.

The human traits in birds are many, as most sympathetic naturalists have testified. Mr. Burroughs has told us that there are jealousies and rivalries among the little winged folk and that the peace of families is often disturbed by outside flirts and lady killers. Quoting this statement in The Dial, another observer gives us to understand that the errant bird husband is duly punished. "I have myself," he says, "seen an English hen sparrow holding a cock by the topknot and dangle him clear off his feet, while her friends punished him with violent peckings."

The frozen meal stretches across the breadth of northern Asia. It never decays and is accessible the moment the snow melts. The same heat which thaws the fruit brings into being the most prolific insect life in the world—the mosquito swarms on the tundra. No European can live there without a veil after the snow melts. The gun barrels are black with them, and clouds of them often obscure the sight.

Thus the insect eating birds have only to open their mouths to fill them with mosquitoes, and thus the presence of swarms of cliff chaffs, pipis and the wagtails in this arctic region is accounted for.—Pearson's.

Human Traits In Birds.

The human traits in birds are many, as most sympathetic naturalists have testified. Mr. Burroughs has told us that there are jealousies and rivalries among the little winged folk and that the peace of families is often disturbed by outside flirts and lady killers. Quoting this statement in The Dial, another observer gives us to understand that the errant bird husband is duly punished. "I have myself," he says, "seen an English hen sparrow holding a cock by the topknot and dangle him clear off his feet, while her friends punished him with violent peckings."

UNCLE SAM IN THE KING ROW

Why We Send Special Representatives to Royal Functions In England and Spain

THE United States will figure prominently at two of the courts of Europe during the coming spring and summer, for, besides the special embassy to the court of St. James to represent this government at the coronation of King Edward, President Roosevelt has appointed a special envoy to be present and take part in the ceremonies attendant on the coming of age of the king of Spain and his ascension to the throne.

to attend the crowning of King Edward is in response to an invitation from the court of St. James. When the date of the coronation was decided upon, King Edward and his ministers addressed invitations to the great powers to take part in the ceremony by means of representatives of their respective executives.

Minor powers received no such invitations except in cases where their rulers are personally related to the reigning house of Great Britain. For instance, neither the kingdom of Servia nor the Swiss republic was invited to send representatives.

It is worthy of note, as an evidence that the United States has grown to be considered a great power, to state that no invitation to take part in the coronation of Queen Victoria was addressed to this country, while for the coronation of her son Uncle Sam was one of the first to receive an intimation from the king that his presence by special representative was desired. The French republic has received a similar invitation, but the court of St. James has paid no such compliment to Mexico or any of the South American republics.

The special embassadors of both the United States and France will receive the same honors and distinctions as royal and imperial representatives of the monarchical governments. Royal carriages and servants will be placed at their disposal during their stay in London, while military, naval and court officers will be designated to remain in attendance upon them as gentlemen in waiting, precisely as if they were royal personages.

Whitelaw Reid will be the embassador extraordinary from the United States, and some French general or admiral of eminence, probably General the Marquis de Gallifet, formerly minister of war and an old friend of King Edward, will represent France.

When Whitelaw Reid went over to England as special embassador at the time of Queen Victoria's jubilee in 1897, exceptional honors were lavished by the late queen on our representative.

As special embassadors outrank the regular incumbents, Mr. Reid during the term of his special mission will take precedence of Joseph Choate in all official and social functions. The special embassador will enjoy the same prerogatives and diplomatic immunities as the resident embassador, and he and his staff will be accorded extra-territorial status and complete immunity from British jurisdiction.

It is perhaps unnecessary to state that the special mission from the United States or any other power represented at the coronation will not render that homage to the king which is demanded from his own subjects. Bending the knee or kissing the hand would be decidedly out of place on the part of foreigners. The tokens of respect paid by Mr. Reid and his staff will be the same as foreign embassadors at Washington accord to the president of the United States.

In the matter of dress the most democratic simplicity maintains in the case of the American embassador. He is not expected to appear in uniform or even in what is designated "frock dress," which is black knee breeches, black silk stockings and pumps. He will appear at all the ceremonies, whether held by day or night, in plain evening dress, as he did during the queen's jubilee.

Special Embassador Whitelaw Reid will be accompanied on his special mission by General James H. Wilson as representative of the United States army, and Captain Charles E. Clark will act in the same capacity for the navy. Besides, there will be three secretaries—J. P. Morgan, Jr.; Edmund Lincoln Baylies, and William S. K. Wetmore.

Whitelaw Reid, head of the special embassy, has had a wide experience in matters of this kind. He represented this country at Queen Victoria's jubilee in 1897 and was a member of the peace commission in Paris the following year. He also served as minister to France during the administration of President Harrison. He was born in Ohio sixty-five years ago and for thirty years has been editor and chief owner of the New York Tribune.

General James Harrison Wilson is a native of Illinois, although he now hails from Delaware. He is the same age as Mr. Reid. His first active service in the field occurred during the civil war as an officer of engineers and he was rapidly promoted. For gallant and meritorious services he was brevetted a major general in 1866.

On the breaking out of the Spanish war, after having been out of the service for many years, he again took up arms and as major general of volunteers commanded the First division of the First army corps. His record as a soldier has been brilliant.

Captain Charles Edgar Clark, who represents the navy, is still fresh in the public mind. He it was who brought the battleship Oregon around Cape Horn from San Francisco, a run of 14,000 miles, arriving at Florida in good condition. This feat has no parallel in naval annals. At Santiago it was Captain Clark's ship that, with the Brooklyn, bore the brunt of battle. It is in recognition of his splendid services that he is sent to the coronation. Captain Clark was born in Vermont in 1843.

Of the secretaries of the special embassy J. P. Morgan, Jr., is the son of the famous financier and is the London representative of J. P. Morgan & Co. He was born in New York and was graduated from Harvard in 1889.

Edmund Lincoln Baylies is a member of a New York law firm. He is forty-three years old. He also is a Harvard graduate.

William S. K. Wetmore is the son of Senator Wetmore of Rhode Island. He is between twenty-eight and thirty years of age and is secretary of the Hongkong and Shanghai bank in New York. Mr. Wetmore is well known in New York society and is one of the twenty-four young men whom Mrs. Astor honored by putting him on her list of the new One Hundred at a ball recently given by her.

Dr. Jabez L. M. Curry, who has been appointed special envoy to Spain to represent the president at the coming of age of King Alfonso XIII., was born in Georgia nearly seventy-seven years ago. He is now president of the Southern Baptist board of foreign missions. He is an ordained minister of the Baptist church.

As United States minister to Spain he was present when the infant king was presented to the assembled ministers on a silver salver, as is the custom in Spain on the birth of the heir to the throne.

WITH AX AND BLOCK.

Criminal Executions In Prussia Still Performed by the Headsman.

Seventeenth century methods still prevail in Prussia in the matter of the execution of criminals. The man sentenced there to suffer capital punishment is led to the fatal block, and his head is chopped off with identically the same sort of ax as that which was used to put a period to the career of Charles I. in the Tower of London on that fateful 30th of January 252 years ago. Practically the only difference between the twentieth century execution and that of the time of Cromwell is that the condemned is not put to death publicly.

In many parts of the German empire the guillotine has taken the place of the gallows and the block, but in Prussia old fashioned justice clings tenaciously to the old fashions, and not the rope nor the automatic knife nor the power of electricity has been able to displace the broadax as the law's official implement of death. The only concession made to modern sentiment is in the garb of the executioner.

This functionary does not, as in the earlier times, dress in doublet and hose and hide his ensanguined identity behind a frightsome mask. Instead, he appears at the execution garbed in a frock coat of somber hue and correct cut, and he wears upon his head, even when delivering the death stroke, a tall silk hat. His three assistants are similarly attired.

Why this garb was chosen no one can say authoritatively. It is one of those things the origin of which appears to have been forgotten with the originators. But it is the lawful costume, prescribed in the regulations, which apply also to the twelve civilian witnesses who must attend an execution, with the result that a stranger witness is unable to say until the ax has fallen which of the other fifteen silk hatted, frock coated individuals grouped about him is the man who lives by death.—New York Press.

FLOWER AND TREE.

Keep begonias where the air is not too dry, and they will not drop their leaves.

In watering house plants sufficient should be given to soak the soil thoroughly.

A tree is nearly dormant in winter, especially one that has been lately transplanted.

Plants in a dormant state require very little water during the winter, and an excess will cause decay.

Drenching rosebushes with strong quassia tea is a good curative of bugs and other destructive insects and pests.

To root cuttings quickly fill a saucer full of sand, into which the slips may be set. Keep the sand the consistency of mud.

Never give up a decaying rosebush until you have tried watering it two or three times a week with soot tea for a short time.

Repotting of plants becomes necessary for two reasons—the plant uses up the available fertility in the soil and fills the pots with roots.

To prevent crotched trees from splitting after they come into bearing twist and fasten two small limbs together, and as the stem grows it will prevent splitting.

Cuttings of quick growing herbaceous plants, like heliotrope, verbena, phlox, geraniums, root quickly, chrysanthemums quickest of all. Choose cuttings when the plants are most vigorous.

Perhaps.

Mr. Clubman—I see by the papers that a poor young man who lost both his legs while saving the life of a beautiful heiress at a railway crossing is to marry the girl. She dismissed all suitors and offered herself to him.

His three assistants are similarly attired.

Why this garb was chosen no one can say authoritatively. It is one of those things the origin of which appears to have been forgotten with the originators. But it is the lawful costume, prescribed in the regulations, which apply also to the twelve civilian witnesses who must attend an execution, with the result that a stranger witness is unable to say until the ax has fallen which of the other fifteen silk hatted, frock coated individuals grouped about him is the man who lives by death.—New York Press.

FLOWER AND TREE.

Keep begonias where the air is not too dry, and they will not drop their leaves.

A tree is nearly dormant in winter, especially one that has been lately transplanted.

Drenching rosebushes with strong quassia tea is a good curative of bugs and other destructive insects and pests.

To root cuttings quickly fill a saucer full of sand, into which the slips may be set. Keep the sand the consistency of mud.

Never give up a decaying rosebush until you have tried watering it two or three times a week with soot tea for a short time.

Repotting of plants becomes necessary for two reasons—the plant uses up the available fertility in the soil and fills the pots with roots.

To prevent crotched trees from splitting after they come into bearing twist and fasten two small limbs together, and as the stem grows it will prevent splitting.

Cuttings of quick growing herbaceous plants, like heliotrope, verbena, phlox, geraniums, root quickly, chrysanthemums quickest of all. Choose cuttings when the plants are most vigorous.

Perhaps.

Mr. Clubman—I see by the papers that a poor young man who lost both his legs while saving the life of a beautiful heiress at a railway crossing is to marry the girl. She dismissed all suitors and offered herself to him.

HIS WIFE WAS INFORMED

HE ASKED THE GIRL TO ELOPE

To Pittsburg, But Her Mother, Suspicious, Investigated And Discovered That the Deceiver Had a Wife And Child in Zanesville.

One of the most sensational stories brought to light in the East End for many months was told this morning by Mrs. R. W. Lemmon, of Mulberry street.

The story Mrs. Lemmon told a reporter in her home this morning follows:

"Some months ago Wm. U. Betz came to the East End and began to do carpenter work on a new house then being built on First avenue. Within a short time we began to talk to him and it was nothing until he began to call at our house, and incidentally asked to 'keep company' with our daughter Daisy. We thought nothing of this, and Betz commenced to come around regularly. It was not long until he asked Daisy if she would reserve Wednesday and Sunday evenings for him, which request was readily granted. He boarded at the home of Mrs. Hamilton, on Ohio avenue and Mulberry street, and was looked upon by those who knew him as a model young man."

Betz never went anywhere with Miss Lemmon, and after he had been coming to the Lemmon home for several weeks he was asked if he was not a married man. This he denied. In some manner certain young men of the East End began to question him as to him being married and he intimated that he was married once, but was divorced, and that in settling the case he paid his wife $4,000. Still he continued to come to the Lemmon home, and only a few weeks ago he asked Miss Daisy to elope with him to Pittsburg, where they could marry and live together without being molested. He also told the young lady that if she was not satisfied with her surroundings there, she could take what furniture he would buy to furnish the room and return to her mother and father in the East End, telling them that she had been fooled. This suggestion was made by Betz so that Miss Lemmon would know what to do if she did not like life in Pittsburg. Mrs. Lemmon was immediately told of the proposition made by Betz, but Betz was not informed, as he asked the lady that she keep the matters as quiet as possible.

Then Mrs. Lemmon made inquiry of the postmasters at Zanesville and Ruraldale, in Muskingum county, his former home, and found that Betz had a wife and a 10-year-old daughter residing at 450 East Main street, Zanesville. Mrs. Lemmon wrote Mrs. Betz of the proposals made to her daughter and asked the woman if she was divorced. In reply a letter was received, which in part read:

"Your letter almost makes me frantic with grief, although I thank you for the information. Yes, Mrs. Lemmon, Mr. Betz lives with his wife and baby and is not divorced. Do you mean to say that he has been keeping company with your daughter since June last? I have been wanting to come to East Liverpool, but have been refused by him. I have been helping make a living by sewing. I have begged him to come home, but he has refused. I, Mrs. May Betz, am Wm. U. Betz's lawful and legal wife, and we have not been divorced. His daughter's name is Helen. If he doesn't know this, tell him. God be with you till we meet."

Matters were then arranged between Mrs. Lemmon and Mrs. Betz for the latter to visit the East End. Betz, however, heard of this in some manner and he left yesterday for Zanesville, telling Mrs. Hamilton, his boarding mistress, that he had secured a position as a traveling salesman for a Zanesville firm. Mrs. Lemmon also received a letter from the man's wife, which Betz wrote her a few days ago, in which he made especial inquiry as to the health of his child. This letter is now in the possession of Mrs. Lemmon, with two others which Mrs. Betz wrote. Mrs. Hamilton, it is said, has also received letters from Mrs. Betz, but believed Betz to be upright. It is now believed that as soon as Betz heard his wife and daughter were coming to the East End he went to Bellaire, where he proposes to intercept them and return to Zanesville.

In the last letter Mrs. Lemmon received Mrs. Betz said:

"I thank you for your invitation to come to the East End. Have your daughter pay no more attention to him. His mother makes her home with us now. He has also a heavy ring with my intials, E. M. B., inside, and I ask if he has given any presents to your daughter. Pardon me, but I beg of you for the sake of his poor white-haired mother and his only and heart-broken wife if you can end this trouble. Does Mrs. Hamilton know of this?"

Betz was employed as a carpenter by Contractor Harvey McHenry.

BOYS BADLY HURT WHILE COASTING

THEIR SLED CRASHED INTO A TELEPHONE POLE.

George Tatgenhorst And Carl Thompson Narrowly Escape Death. Others Injured.

A coasting accident which came near costing the lives of two boys occurred last evening on Lincoln avenue. Several lads, among them being George Tatgenhorst and Carl Thompson, were seated on a big road sled and were coming down the hill at high speed when the sled got beyond control of the steerer.

When at a point near the Standard pottery a collision with a telephone pole resulted and the youngsters were hurled into a heap. Young Tatgenhorst fell under the sled and had one of his legs fearfully mangled, though no bones were broken. The Thompson boy was also badly cut and bruised, and it is feared he is hurt internally.

Another accident occurred last evening, also on Lincoln avenue, in which a sled load of boys collided with Dr. W. A. Hobbs' buggy. Two boys named Webber and Jennings were severely, but not dangerously, hurt.

WILL SEEK RECOGNITION

Local Typographical Union Nominates Criss McConnell for A. F. L. Delegate.

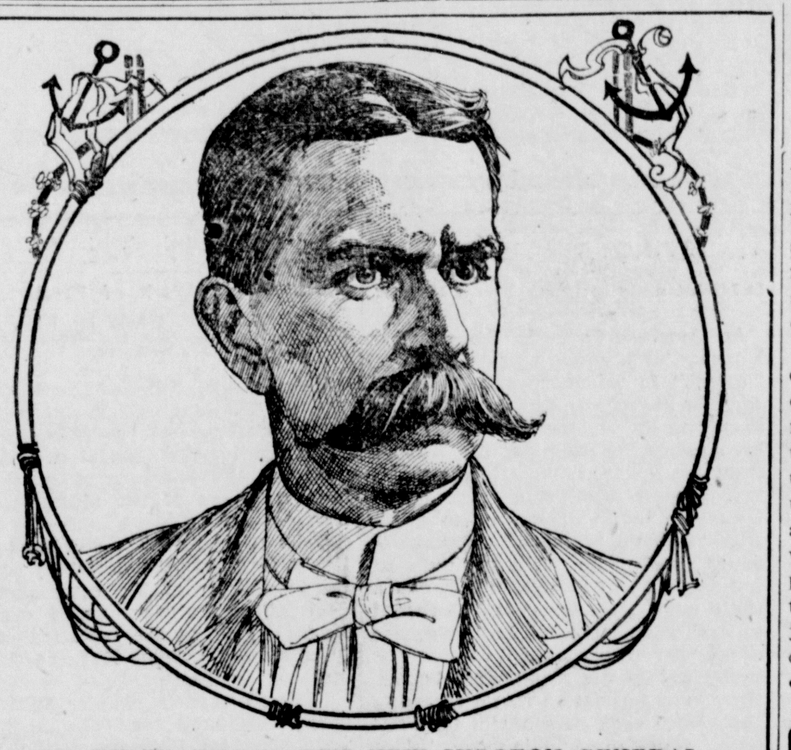

Typographical union No. 318 at an adjourned meeting last night made nominations for international officers. The organization has the referendum system in effect and the election of officers will take place in May.

Since the union in this city was organized in 1892 it has had no representative in the executive council of the international, nor has it been honored with a seat in the convention. At the meeting last night it was decided to make a bid for some recognition. Criss McConnell, a charter member of 318, was nominated for the position of delegate to the convention of the American Federation of Labor from the allied crafts. The union pledged itself to not only support Mr. McConnell's candidacy, but a committee of the gentleman's own selection was appointed to carry on the work. Circulars will be mailed to every union in the jurisdiction of the international union and allied trades.

Th other officers nominated are: President, James M. Lynch, Syracuse, N. Y.; first vice president, C. E. Hawkes, Chicago; secretary-treasurer, John W. Bramwood, Denver; agent of the Childs-Drexel home for union printers, William Kennedy; delegate to American Federation of Labor convention, Max S. Hayes, Cleveland; trustees of printers' home, W. J. White, San Francisco; Harry K. Stephan, New York; Wm. C. Trump, Norwich, Conn.

A communication was received from headquarters, asking that the local organization interest itself in the passage of the law requiring the placing of the union label upon all state work.

HURLED DEFIANCE AT THE OFFICERS

Armed With An Ax and Knife, Dave Wooley Goes On the Warpath.

And the Half-Crazed Man Threatened to Kill Everybody Who Tried to Interfere With Him—Finally Arrested And Jailed.

Armed with an ax and a huge butcher knife, Dave Wooley, who lives in a boat house near the flint mill, while crazed from the effects of liquor last night, terrorized the other members of the family by threatening to kill them and defied two officers until they went after him with their clubs and overpowered him.

One of the younger Wooley boys rushed excitedly into the city hall shortly after dark and informed Policemen Mahoney and Stafford that Dave was throwing trunks and furniture out of the boat and trying to kill those of the family who offered to interfere.

Hurriedly the officers made their way to the scene and on going into the boat found Dave behind some boxes raving like a mad man with the knife in one hand and the ax in the other. Blood covered his face and he looked like a murderous desperado. A command to halt from one of the officers brought an oath from the crazed man, who raised the ax high above his head and dared anyone to come near him. Again he was commanded to throw down his weapons, but he refused, once more threatening to commit murder if an attempt was made to arrest him.

Finding that force was necessary to subdue the desperate man the officers drew their clubs and started towards him. Mahoney went to one side and Stafford to the other and they were about to close in on their man when he weakened, dropped his weapons and threw up his hands. He

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, February 7.—The general assembly transacted a small amount of business Thursday. No bills were introduced nor acted upon that had any close bearing on Columbiana county. The Painter house bill, increasing the salaries of the judges of the supreme court from $5,000 to $6,000 per annum, was made a law under suspension of rules Thursday afternoon by the senate. The measure was rushed through in order to make it apply to Judge-elect Price, who takes his seat on the supreme bench next Monday, succeeding Judge Minshall, the acting chief justice.

Senator Connell supported the bill, only two votes being cast against it in the senate. It required a fight to secure its passage in the house. Messrs. Buell and Crist refused to support it for economic reasons and argued that they were actuated by a desire to do nothing which could be construed as being inconsistent with Governor Nash's policy of retrenchment. Senator Connell voted for the measure on the principle that the onerous and responsible duties of the position warranted an increase in the compensation. Senator Connell left for Pittsburg Thursday night. Messrs. Buell and Crist leave for home today.

Bills were introduced in the house today as follows: Authorizing Canton, Youngstown and Akron to issue bonds to cover floating debts; requesting the senators and representatives from Ohio in congress to vote for a constitutional amendment favoring the election of United States senators by a direct vote of the people; making it an offense punishable by life imprisonment to blow up or attempt to blow up safes or vaults; making it a penitentiary offense to steal automobiles; requiring full crews on passenger trains.

Deputy Examiner Elmer E. Miller, of Canton, has notified Chief Examiner Collier, of the state board of engineers, that he has been examining the engineers of Columbiana county this week. Yesterday he was scheduled to be in East Liverpool. Today and tomorrow he will be at Steubenville. He also filed his monthly report, which is as follows: Applications received, 47; applications rejected, 14; licenses issued, 33; licenses renewed, 151; receipts, $217; expenses, $96.30.

MANY SERIOUSLY HURT BY SLED OVERTURNING

A sled load of young people from this city while on the way to Fairview, W. Va., last night, met with a serious accident while about two miles beyond Chester. Barney Vale, a clerk at Ansley's drug store, in this city, who was among the excursionists, was hurt about the head and is suffering from a most unusual affliction.

While the sled was passing over a slanting spot in the road the rear end began to slide to the lower side and continued until a rut was reached when the vehicle came to an abrupt stop with sufficient force to throw over the bed. The occupants were all dumped out and nearly all were more or less bruised.

Vale tumbled headlong and struck against a telephone pole. His face and scalp were cut, but it was not thought until he reached home that his injuries were serious. This morning he arose from his bed and went to the store where he is employed. Mr. Ansley questioned the clerk concerning the accident, but the young man's mind was so dazed he could not recall a single detail concerning it.

Fearing serious developments Mr. Ansley induced the injured clerk to go to his room, where a physician was called. An examination developed that Vale's skull had been badly bruised, which so affected the brain that the memory had become a blank. He is yet unable to recall anything regarding the accident and quiet was ordered in the hope that rest will restore his memory.

John Brooks was severely cut over the eye by coming in contact with a sharp stone. It required three stitches to close the wound.

Daniel Southall, colored, who was driving the horses attached to the ill-fated sled fell heavily and had one of his arms thrown out of place. Others in the sled received cuts and bruises.

Miss Humrickhouse and Miss Wells, who were of the party, were also hurt.

Biddle Brothers Sold Clothing In This City Only As a Blind.

MORE DETAILS COME TO LIGHT

Interesting Facts Which Go to Show That the Biddle Gang Expected to Rob the D. M. Ogilvie Store. Aroused Suspicion And Were Foiled

The exclusive account published in Tuesday evening's News Review concerning the swindling game worked in this city by the Biddle brothers, was effective in bringing to light some additional details today which are taken as positive evidence by the police that the brothers had bigger game in view when they first came here than fleecing customers from whom they took orders for clothing.

At the time the Biddles were working their game a number of visits were made by a suspicious looking couple at D. M. Ogilvie & Co.'s store, whose descriptions given to the police at the time they were first suspected by Mr. Ogilvie, led to the belief after the arrest in Pittsburg of Walter Dorman and Jennie Seebers as members of the Biddle gang that they were identical with the couple that tried, it is believed, to set plans to rob the Ogilvie store.

On each occasion the woman called at the store she was accompanied by the same escort. She never made any purchases, but had the clerks take her to the silk department, where each time she made close inspections of the finest pieces. While the woman thus occupied herself her escort would take the opportunity to make his way to the rear end of the store room, where he was once detected in the act of trying a window.

The clerks were first to become suspicious of the couple, and told Mr. Ogilvie of their strange actions. He in turn reported the matter to Chief Thompson and for two weeks the police watched the store both day and night. Two of the officers wore citizen's clothes during the nights they were on guard, but nothing was seen of the man thought to be Dorman after the police were informed of Mr. Ogilvie's suspicions.

Diligent search during the next few days failed to locate the woman, and it is believed by the police that she left the city with the strange-acting man. It was not known at that time that the Biddles were here—in fact, they were then unknown to the local authorities, so far as their criminal records were concerned—but since the News Review's account of the brother's transactions while here has been sifted down and confirmed by the police, it is the conclusion of the entire force and also Mr. Ogilvie that it was Dorman and the Seeber woman who caused suspicion by their frequent visits at the Ogilvie store.

It was learned today beyond the least doubt that the Biddles were here at the same time and they disappeared at about the time the strange man and woman did. This fact has conduced to clinch as a positive belief an opinion formed some time ago that the quartet came to East Liverpool together with the express purpose of perpetrating a big robbery.

Chief Thompson has made numerous inquiries the past few days in relation to the case and is positive as a result of the information gathered that the vigilance of the police in guarding the Ogilvie store foiled the Biddle gang in a contemplated bold crime.

CAUGHT IN CANADA THIS MORNING

C. N. Stout Is Accused of Absconding With $800 Belonging to the Town.

Lisbon, February 7.—(Special)—C. N. Stout, of East Palestine, was arrested in Hamilton, Ontario, this morning. He is the electrician who left East Palestine, it is alleged, with about $800 of money belonging to the city. He had charge of the city's lighting and water plants.

PETTY THIEVING

One of the Members Lost $16 From His Pocket While in the Gymnasium.

A system of petty thieving has been carried on for some time in the Y. M. C. A. locker rooms, and is causing considerable annoyance. The amounts taken heretofore have been trifling, but yesterday some $16 or $18 was taken from the pocket of one of the members while he was in the gymnasium.

This is a problem that every association has to face sooner or later, and, as a matter of protection, there is placed in the secretary's office a series of lock boxes, 20 in all, where any member can deposit valuables. Besides this the lockers are provided with individual locks, so that anyone taking due precaution can be absolutely sure of losing nothing. The thief or thieves take advantage of the careless ones, however.

AGREEMENT REPUDIATED

Pittsburg Parties Who Agreed to Purchase Gas Wells Near Lisbon, Will Not Do So.

Lisbon, Feb. 7.—The Pittsburg parties who agreed to purchase the oil wells on the Aaron Fink farm west of Lisbon from the Salem Gas and Oil company, it is reported, have gone back back on their agreement, probably because they could not raise the money. Not long ago the Columbiana Gas company, composed principally of Pittsburg men, was organized and incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, with $150,000 capital stock.

The gentlemen who were instrumental in the organization of the corporation were J. H. Diamond and Edward T. Slease, of Pittsburg. The company then secured an option of the territory leased and the six wells owned by the Salem Gas and Oil company, for which option they were to pay a certain amount. At that time Mr. Diamond appeared before the city council and secured a franchise to pipe the gas through Lisbon, but it is now stated that the old company will pipe the gas here.

EAST END

Two Met With Painful Accidents While Engaged in Sledding Yesterday.

Two serious coasting accidents occurred in the East End yesterday, the attendance of a physician being required in each instance. Yesterday afternoon Roy Mayes was coasting down the hill on Pennsylvania avenue and when near the old school house collided with a sled being drawn up the hill by Miss Katie Stamm. Mayes caught his hand between two sleds, splitting the hand between the first and second fingers. The injury is very painful.

Another serious accident was that which happened to Norman Weger, who was sledding on High street, in the rear of the Erie street M. E. church. Weger was coming down the hill, lying on his stomach on his sled and in making the descent the sled passed over some broken glass. Weger's arm struck a piece of glass, which cut the flesh about six inches between the wrist and elbow. He was removed to his home where the injury was dressed by a physician.

HELD HIGH CARNIVAL

Young People Took Possession of a New House And Danced And Fought.

A new house on Erie street was completed a few days ago by Louis Runion, and in honor of the event the house was christened last evening by a dance, given by a number of young people residing in that part of the East End. Securing the services of a lone fiddler the young folks went into the house and soon all were making merry. In the course of events a dispute arose between two of the dancers which resulted in a fight. One of the dancers pulled a gun from his pocket and, flourishing it over his head, frightened almost every person in the house.

Special Officer Edward Wilson happened along just as the fight was at its height, and after quieting matters, the dance continued. One young lady who attended the festivities fainted, and three men ran up stairs and locked themselves in a room until after the storm was over. It is intimated the affair will be aired in police court.

An Explosion Prevented.

What might have become a serious explosion occurred at the Laughlin pottery No. 2 yesterday evening. Shortly after 4 o'clock a gasket around the three-inch gas main about glost kiln No. 20 blew out, causing a large amount of gas to escape. Luckily the escaping gas went into the kiln, but as the accident was soon discovered the gas was turned off, remaining so for an hour when necessary repairs were made. Had the gasket caused a break in the floor quite an explosion would have occurred.

EAST END AFFAIRS.

W. T. Hayes, of High street, is very ill, suffering from a complication of diseases.

Mrs. James Martin, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, is recovering.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Calhoun, of Railroad street, are rejoicing over the birth of a daughter.

James Johnson gave a sledding party to a number of young folks in the East End last evening.

One conversion was reported at the revival service at the Second Presbyterian church last evening.

There is little change in the condition of Miss Ruby Reed, who has been ill at her home on Erie street of pneumonia.

Miss Lydia Farrar, of St. George street, who has been ill with gastric fever for several weeks, is recovering slowly.

The thank offering at the missionary meeting at the Second Presbyterian church Tuesday evening netted about $20.

A social was given last evening at the home of Mrs. Fred Reilley by the Mite society of the Second U. P. church. The meeting was an enjoyable one.

No announcement has been made as to who will occupy the pulpit of the Second U. P. church next Sunday. Assurance has been made, however, that the usual services will be held.

INTEREST DEEPENING

In the Services at the Presbyterian Church—Good Sermons Yesterday.

The interest in the services at the Presbyterian church is deepening day by day. The Christians are becoming greatly concerned for their unsaved friends. Many are the fathers and mothers who are burdened with a desire to see their children saved.

The afternoon service yesterday was well attended and the thrilling story of Abraham's sacrifice of Isaac was Rev. Mr. Biederwolf's theme. He impressed the thoughts that God wants our best. He is richest who gives most that God may enrich him with Himself.

In the evening Rev. Mr. Biederwolf took for his text the strong words of Paul, Romans 9:3, "For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ, for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh." His theme was, "Passover for Saving Souls." (1) It is when joined to Christ. (2) It is satisfied only in the object to be gained. (3) It is satisfied only in saving men.

Prof. Maxwell sang "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" When the invitation was extended to those who desired to become Christians a goodly number responded.

MAN AND HIS LEGS.

The Nether Limbs as an Index to the State of the Mind.

There are many indexes to the mind, but I learned of a new one the other day when I called to see a busy man at his office down on Broad street. When I entered the outer office, it was quite evident that he was in, for I could see him through an open door leaning over his desk quite intent on papers that lay in front of him. I spoke to the clerk in attendance, whom I know real well, and asked that he announce me. He glanced into the other room before speaking.

"Wait a minute or two," he said. "It will be better, for he will have you come in the moment I say you are here."

I didn't quite understand what he meant, but I took a seat to wait a minute or two. I waited five of them and then spoke again.

"Wait until he crosses his legs," answered the clerk.

"What has that to do with it?" I asked.

"Everything," he replied. "He doesn't like to be disturbed when he is busy, and I know he is very busy because he has his legs out straight. A man never thinks hard with his legs crossed. As soon as his mind lets up a little, then he straightens, crosses his legs and is ready for visitors and a chat. When his legs go down again, it is time for the visitor to take his leave. Just bear that in mind and see if I am not right."

As he finished speaking up went the legs, and I was announced and received at once.—New York Herald.

It Is Not a Good Place For a Man of Small Income.

An American who in the classical language of his country is at present "located" in London wants to know whether any city in the world is quite so niggardly as our town. He has been going the round of the London restaurants and has encountered in the management of them a spirit which distresses him. "There is, to begin with," he says, "a charge of from twopence to sixpence for guarding your hat and coat in the cloakroom, and a tip in addition is expected. You want to wash your hands—another twopence or another sixpence and another tip. You take up the menu, and, behold, there is an intimation that a charge of threepence each person will be made under the guise of 'table money.' The charge varies according to the nature of the place. Threepence is the lowest and sixpence perhaps the average. At a great many restaurants it is 1 shilling and in at least two that I have visited 1s. 6d. The only difference is that in the lower priced restaurants it is called 'table money' and in the higher priced ones placed under the captivating heading of 'couvert.' To my mind, an entrance fee frankly demanded at the door would be much less offensive than to find yourself asked at the end of a dinner to pay for the trouble and expense of cleaning up the cutlery you have used."

His conclusion of the whole matter is that "London lives by imposing a fixed tariff on the accessories that in every other city I have ever been to are thrown in gratis," and he thinks that being a gentleman is one of the most expensive professions an Englishman can have. He declares it to be an utter delusion that London is a cheap place to live in. "For the poor man," he says, "the man whose income is less than £800 a year, there is no city where less can be had in the way of comforts and even the necessities of life. In New York it is only the luxuries that cost. The expenses of everyday living may be as great or as small as one cares to make them. New York, in fact, is laid out for the poor man. From the transportation system to the price of such fundamental charges on the household treasury as coal, ice, fuel, meat, bread, milk and fruit, almost everything conspires to bring him in a good return for a very small outlay. All these things are cheaper in New York than in London."—London Chronicle.

Bills In Congress.

The words "has introduced a bill in congress," applied to a senator or representative, usually sound much larger than their ordinary meaning warrants. In order properly to estimate the value of the introduction of a bill one must remember that of 12,000 or 15,000 measures introduced a few hundred only are passed. As for proposed amendments to the constitution, the infant mortality among them is appalling. Each new congress sees a score or more of proposals for a "sixteenth amendment to the constitution." We shall doubtless some time have such a thing, yet three amendments, all of which were consequences of a great civil war, represent the only changes made in the constitution since the presidency of Thomas Jefferson.—Youth's Companion.

Wintering in Colorado And Utah.

The climate of Colorado and Utah has long been world famous, but it is only within recent years that attention has been given to the delightful winter climate of these states. Today physicians all over the United States send their patients to Colorado and Utah to escape the rigors of eastern winters and to benefit by her invigorating atmosphere and health-giving sunshine.

It is not necessary to add an elaborate argument—the conclusion is self-evident and inevitable. The winter climate of Colorado and Utah on the whole presents advantages for the invalid and the pleasure-seeker that cannot fail to command attention.

An erroneous impression prevails that because the Rocky mountains have a high elevation the mercury in the thermometer drops down below zero in the winter season and stops there, and that the snow mounts up with the altitude. The fact is that the average precipitation of moisture in the lowlands of the mountain region during the entire year is only 14.15 inches. With such average precipitation there is practically no danger of snow blockades on the railroads, save at a few points exposed to drifts and these points have been amply protected. This is especially true of the lines of the Denver & Rio Grande and the Rio Grande Western between Denver and Ogden at all seasons of the year. Facts speak for themselves, and the fact is that travel over "The Scenic Line of the World" has gone on with less interruption from snow blockades during the last ten winters than it has upon the majority of railroads in other localities which are popularly supposed to be more free from such delays than the mountain systems. A Theological Nose.

"I was once showing a young Japanese around Boston," says a correspondent of The Living Church, "and casually dropped into Trinity church with him. He was at the time a recent convert to Unitarianism in his own country and was wide awake to everything connected with American civilization and American Christianity.

"A few minutes after entering Trinity, as we approached the center aisle, I noticed him making a distinct sniffling noise and, looking toward him, saw that he was in the act of smelling, his nostrils moving convulsively after the manner of an animal scenting something. Looking surprised and mystified, I at once asked him what was the matter, and in broken English he replied, 'I smell paganism.'

"This method of detecting false doctrines is capable of some curious developments."

Animals In Turkey.

In Turkey the partridge is detested because once it betrayed the prophet to his enemies, and its legs are red because they were dipped in the blood of Hassan. If a man kills a panther, he is imprisoned for twenty-four hours and then is handsomely rewarded. The crane is respected, and it is a crime to kill it.

MINERS DETERMINED.

WILL ILLINOIS OPERATORS AID?

Apparently Willing to Assist Men, as Far as Possible, to Force Run-of-Mine Into Pennsylvania, Indiana and Ohio.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 7.—No agreement was reached yesterday by the joint committee upon which a basis of settlement of the differences between the United Mine Workers and operators of the four competitive mining states can be made.

The sub-committee held a session yesterday morning, at which the question of the miners' demand for a straight increase of 10 per cent was the principal topic of discussion. The miners' representatives on the committee were given to understand by Francis L. Robbins that the operators are a unit against any increase; that this attitude is firm, and that so long as the mine workers insist upon their demands for the introduction of the run-of-mine system and the differential between pick and machine mining the matter of 10 per cent increase, or any other increase, for that matter, will not be considered by the operators.

This was taken by the miners' delegates to indicate that the operators are not so averse to an increase in the price of digging coal as they are to the other features of the submitted scale, and after an hour's fruitless discussion, without favorable results, the committee adjourned to meet yesterday afternoon, when the joint scale committee had been called to hear a report of the sub-committee.

The question was referred back to the sub-committee, with instructions to arrive at a conclusion, if possible, this afternoon.

The Miners' Delegates Determined.

It developed yesterday that the miner delegates generally, while united for the increased wage, are not in favor of sacrificing the possibility of securing an increase through an abandonment of the run-of-mine and differential propositions.

According to rumor one of the most difficult propositions before the joint scale committee has been the apparent willingness of the Illinois operators to assist the miners, as far as possible, to force the run-of-mine system into the Pennsylvania, Indiana and Ohio fields. The organization of the United Mine Workers in Illinois is the strongest in the country, and it has been able to force upon the operators of that field the run-of-mine system, which, as claimed by the operators of that state, works to their loss in competition with the mining interests of the three other states.

REMAIN DANES, IF THEY WISH.

One of the Provisions of Treaty Ceding Islands.

Washington, Feb. 7.—The full text of the treaty between the United States and Denmark for the cession of the Danish West Indian islands, St. Thomas, St. John and St. Croix, which was recently negotiated between Secretary Hay, on the part of the United States, and Minister Brun, for Denmark, has been made public. Among the points are the following in part:

Inhabitants have the privilege within two years' time of either retaining their allegiance to Denmark or becoming citizens of the United States. Failing to declare such allegiance makes them citizens of the United States without further action.

The United States is to pay $5,000,000 for the islands.

GOV. NASH REFUSED.

Would Not Honor Requisition For Man Wanted In North Carolina.

Columbus, Feb. 7.—Governor Nash has refused to honor the requisition of the governor of North Carolina for W. G. Baumgardner, who was arrested here several days ago upon the request of the police authorities of Durham, N. C.

It was charged that Baumgardner had embezzled $400 from a Mrs. Freeland, of that place. He was released here on habeas corpus proceedings and arrested again on a charge of loitering. The requisition was refused upon a showing that the transaction involved did not amount to embezzlement.

BULGARIAN CABINET MINISTER ASSAULTED.

The Power of Illustration In the Turn of a Phrase.

James Russell Lowell said, "There's a deal o' solid kicking in the meekest looking mule." If the statement had been, "There's a good deal of obstinacy covered by apparent amiability," the remark might have passed without a moment's notice, but attached to such a figure as the poet used it will be difficult for the mind ever to get rid of it.

Mazzini says, "Labor is the divine law of our existence." This is little more than commonplace, but when he added, "Repose is desertion and suicide," the commonplace was transfigured into a memorable illustration.

A French writer said, "The really efficient laborer will be found not to crowd his day with work." That seems to be forgettable. When he adds, "He will saunter to his task surrounded by a wide halo of ease and leisure," the halo serves the purpose of an explanatory illustration.

President Garfield once said, "Nine times out of ten the best thing that can happen to a young man is to be tossed overboard and compelled to sink or swim for himself." The tossing overboard was the illustration. The sagacious president gave it significance and emphasis by personal reference, "In all my acquaintance I never knew a man to be drowned who was worth the saving."

When Lavater said, "Habit is altogether too arbitrary a master for me to submit to," it was the word "master" that constituted the memorable illustration.

Carlyle, a great master of metaphor, said truly: "No man lives without jostling and being jostled. In all ways he has to elbow himself through the world, giving and receiving offense." The doctrine of this sentence might easily have become a mere platitude, but it is fixed upon the memory by jostling and being jostled and the elbowing of oneself through the world. This illustration is the very making of the argument.—Joseph Parker, D. D., in Homiletic Review.

New York state is leading all the rest of the country in its efforts to secure good roads. Good roads cost money, and New York is spending money on them. The state this year is expected to appropriate $1,000,000, and country communities, who are willing to help themselves, are to expend as much more, improving their highways. There was a large and enthusiastic good roads convention in Albany last week, and the people of the state appear to be thoroughly awake upon the question. The result of the road-building already accomplished has been to educate the people to the wisdom of such investments more than all the talking and writing ever done on the subject. There is urgent need of such an awakening and of decisive action in Ohio. Why should not the state have a good roads convention, at which those interested in road reform may formulate their ideas and enter upon a campaign for securing such legislation as may be necessary to gain the desired end?

The code bill which is before the legislature proposes radical changes and uniform laws for the government of Ohio municipalities. It has the endorsement of the state bar association and of numerous friends of municipal reform. If it is passed its sponsors say it will greatly simplify the work of future legislatures, preventing a flood of special bills every two years. It will also abolish unnecessary official positions, cheapen the cost of town and city government and prevent expensive litigation. Surely these ends are worth working for, and the general assembly should analyze the bill carefully, ascertain if these claims be true and act accordingly.

The bill raising the salaries of supreme court justices to $6,000 a year has passed the legislature, despite some opposition. Ohio can afford to pay well for the best of talent on the bench of its highest court. But the success of the movement to raise these salaries should not by any means serve as a precedent for a general raise of the pay of state officials and employes.

Prof. Charles W. Pearson will be asked to step down and out of his chair in the Northwestern university. The place to preach the fallibility of the bible is not in a Methodist educational institution, and the professor should have had the grace to resign before he began preaching that sort of doctrine.

Tillman, who champions lynching in this country, is at least consistent in standing up for the bolomen and bandits in the Philippines. He is so seldom consistent that his attitude is worth noting.

It is better not to move at all than to move in a wrong direction. The legislature will have to apply this rule to several hundred bills before it or else it will work harm.

Why don't the Democrats, who are everlastingly finding fault with the administration's Philippine policy, show their patriotism by suggesting a better one?

William C. Whitney is past 60 and has $25,000,000. He has now retired from business, magnanimously resolving to give younger men a chance.

Probably Prince Henry is accustomed to being stared at. If he is not, he is likely to have a disagreeable time of it over here.

Gov. Taft thinks a census of the Filipinos is much needed, but he neglects to mention any one who wants the job of enumerator.

Joseph R. Shawke.

Lisbon, February 7.—(Special)—Joseph R. Shawke died this morning at his home in this town, aged 82 years and 8 months. He was born in Lisbon June 11, 1819, and has resided here all his life, except four years spent in St. Louis and Cincinnati. His father, Jacob Shawke, was one of the earliest settlers, coming here from York county, Pa., in 1804. At the age of 12, Joseph entered his father's blacksmith shop and continued working at that trade until 1889. His wife, nee Sophia Richards, died last April. Since that time Mr. Shawke had failed rapidly. Three children survive—Charles W., a liveryman of Lisbon; Mrs. C. H. Crook, of Lisbon, and Jacob R., of East Liverpool. Two sisters survive—Misses Martha and Lucretia, of Lisbon, and a brother, George W., of Madison, O.

AT THE THEATER

The Schiller Stock company, supporting the talented young actress, Miss Ella Fontainebleau, will be at the Grand opera house all next week presenting a repertoire of the latest New York successes. The opening play is Walter Leslie's great success, "The City of New York." It is a sensational melodrama full of exciting situations and startling climaxes. A carload of elaborate scenery and effects are carried for this production.

The attendance was not large at the opera house last night, but those who were present thoroughly enjoyed the play, "The Sporting Duchess," presented by the King Dramatic company. The frequent and hearty applause attested the appreciation of the excellent work of the company.

POTTERY NEWS

Quite a number of changes are about to be made in the clay shops of the Dresden pottery, the cost of which will reach into the thousands. Being rushed with business the company was compelled to increase its kiln capacity, and now that this has been done changes will have to be made in other departments. For weeks the clay makers have been so rushed that they have been compelled to work late every evening, it being almost impossible to furnish the clay workers with sufficient raw material. To overcome this inconvenience the company has ordered two new plungers, and one of the old ones will be discarded, giving the company an increase of one more plunger over the number now in use. It is intimated that an additional clay press will soon be installed. The two jiggers that were in the old part of the building are being removed to the new end, one of these being placed in position yesterday, and started. The other old jigger was taken down today and will be started at once. Another new jigger has been ordered and will likely be started some time next week. Work on the new kiln to take the place of an old one, dismantled a few days ago, has been started and it is expected that it will be ready to place by next week. The improvements being made at this plant will result in an increase in the working force of the Dresden in many departments. W. C. Brown, one of the popular salesmen for this firm, who has been on an extened eastern trip, is expected to arrive in the city this evening. His next tour will be through the west and south.

The national officers of the Brotherhood are just now negotiating with Manager Maxwell for the use of Rock Springs park for Monday, June 2, at which time the annual picnic of the organization will be held. Mr. Maxwell has manifested a disposition to deal liberally with those in charge of affairs and the picnic will undoubtedly be held at Rock Springs. The arrangements as they have been outlined by the officials will attract a much larger attendance from other pottery towns, and it is thought all previous efforts will be outdone on this occasion.

Much inconvenience has been caused to local manufacturers on account of a shortage of saggers. While there are a number of concerns here which devote their entire capacity to the manufacture of saggers, the supply is inadequate. Two weeks ago a manufacturer placed an order with a local firm for 500 saggers and so far no delivery has been made. While practically every pottery firm in the city employs from one to three saggermakers, these firms where the shortage exists are compelled to borrow or buy from others.

The annual meeting of the directors of the American Sewer Pipe company was held in Jersey City, N. J., this week. Among the important business transacted was the election of Samuel Goucher, of Toronto, and Ralph Allison, of Pittsburg, as members of the board of directors. U. D. Eddy, of New York, was elected president to succeed Alvah Trowbridge, of Pittsburg.

Harry Wolf, of Allegheny, who has been employed in the office of the Edwin M. Knowles company, has become associated with the Vodrey pottery company as chief office man, taking the place made vacant by Mr. Sloan, who is now at the Chelsea pottery at New Cumberland.

James Thurman, who has been employed as a turner at the East Liverpool pottery for the past six months, has resigned his position and within a few days will return to his former home at Louisville.

Orders are being received at the Union almost faster than the ware can be made. Business is being received from all parts of the country, although nothing but dinner ware is being made by the firm.

Local union No. 44, of which the recently instituted local was formerly a part, has donated $100 to the new organization. The contribution was greatly appreciated by the younger local.

Ernest Oswald, a sticker-up at the Buckeye, has been unable to work on account of a sore hand. Several days ago he cut the member and it is feared blood poisoning will result.

Mr. Bandegrift, of the firm of Russell & Bandergrift, Kalamazoo, Mich., was in the city yesterday, placing some large business with the Dresden.

Wilton McDevitt, a presser at the Buckeye, has been off duty for several days on account of illness.

The joint arbitration board is scheduled for a meeting at the Potters' club tonight. It is hardly likely that the members will get together, as at least one of the representatives will be unable to attend.

Miss Bricelin has taken a position at the Union as finisher. During the past few days a number of new finishers have been given employment at this plant.

William Lester, who has been working at the East Palestine pattery, resumed his old bench at the biscuit end of the Dresden this morning.

Matters pertaining to the coming national convention will likely be taken up by the members of No. 9 at its meeting tonight.

Colin McClain, Jr., will take charge of the lathe made vacant at the East Liverpool by the resignation of James Thurman.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sebring, of Sebring, have been spending several weeks in Arizona. They are now at home.

Wililam Welsh has taken a position as jiggerman at the Buckeye. He started yesterday.

H. P. Knoblock, of the Dresden pottery, is spending several days in the east on business.

Edward Messer, employed in the clay department of the East Liverpool has been ill.

J. E. Fox has given up his place at the French China company.

FRIENDS AND VISITORS

Mrs. J. R. Hammond is visiting friends in Monaca.

J. Connell left yesterday for Indianola, Ia.

Miss Della Dugan is very ill at her home on Thompson avenue, suffering with an attack of quinsy.

Mrs. Milligan, who has been in this city for several weeks visiting friends, left yesterday for Kingman, Kan.

Mrs. Arthur Wright and daughter Helen, of Alliance, are visiting Mrs. L. H. Brush, of Pennsylvania avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Taylor, of Sixth street, who have been spending several days in New York, have returned to the city.

Attorney O. S. Marshall, of New Cumberland, was in the city yesterday visiting his brother, E. D. Marshall. Mr. Marshall's father is very ill, and as he is quite aged he is very feeble.

NOON-DAY BIBLE CLASSES

To Be Formed in the Potteries Under Auspices of Y. M. C. A.

As a result of the visit of Mr. Nash, the religious work secretary of the Cleveland association, to this city, it is probable that noon day bible classes will be formed in some of the potteries. These classes are simply for the study of the story of the bible, do not touch on controverted subjects and are not in any sense preaching services.

Cleveland has a large number of such classes and Secretary Wright spent the first three days of the week in that city studying the classes there. No very general effort will be possible here, at least not immediately, but it is hoped that at least three classes can be formed.

The plan of group bible classes will also be adopted, several young men gathering at the home of one once a week to study forming a group. Some five groups are already in formation. The group leaders will meet weekly at the association to study the lesson for the succeeding week.

A crowd of excited people was at the city hall when Wooley was brought in and it was thought because of the blood on his face that the officers had beaten him. This was not true, however. Wooley accidentally cut a small gash in his face while brandishing the butcher knife.

Mayor Davidson fined the man $5 and costs this morning and unless the money is paid by Monday he will be taken to the workhouse.

CANNOT RECOVER

Such Is the Opinion of the Doctor Who Is Attending James Grim.

No change was noted today in the condition of James Grim, who was found near the railroad depot yesterday morning suffering from a convulsion, an account of whose illness was exclusively detailed in last evening's News Review. Dr. Bailey, the attending physician, does not believe the man's recovery is possible.

Mrs. A. M. Stoffel claims she first provided Grim with a home after he left his family and arranged with R. G. Stewart to take care of him when Stewart bought the property he now occupies and where Grim is staying.

WELL BROKEN HORSES.

The Silent Man Generally Has the Most Manageable Animals.

Has any one ever noticed that a s lent man has usually the best broke horses? It may not be true, but all th men of my acquaintance who do n talk much have well broken horse Drive with them, and you will wond how they manage their horses. N management is visible. The horse go where he is wanted without appare effort on the part of the driver. O famous turfman at least has been no ed for his art in driving a horse to th limit of his speed without making move while his rivals were lifting an yelling and whipping theirs. How di he do it? Don't know, but he was man of few words.

READING ROOMS

To Be Formally Opened With an Enjoyable Smoker on Saturday Evening.

The directors of the Reading Room Association, of the C. & P. Railroad company, are making great preparations for the formal opening of the reading rooms in the West End next Saturday afternoon and evening. At the opening several prominent railroad officials are expected to be present, among whom are Supt. R. H. Scriven, of Pittsburg; ex-Supt. John Thomas, of Cleveland, and Supt. J. B. McKim, of the Western division at Ft. Wayne.

A vivid idea of the affair and why it is to be given can be gleaned from the following notice, signed by the board of directors, which has been placed in conspicuous places along the line from Pittsburg to Cleveland:

"To all employes of the C. & P. company: The management has kindly donated a building on Main street, just west of Twentieth street, Wellsville, and fitted it up for the employes' reading room association. The building is provided with an office, reading room, smoking room and book room on the first floor and is also provided with modern bath rooms and a large assembly room on the second floor. The directors of the reading room association beg to announce to the employes that this building is now open to them for their accommodation, and in order that all may have an opportunity of seeing just what the company has been pleased to give us, the directors wish to announce that the building will be formally opened with a 'smoker' on Saturday night, February 8, to which all employes are cordially invited."

COUNCIL IS BLAMED

For Failing to Replace a Broken Fire Alarm Box at City Hall.

The city council is being consured quite severely by people living in the vicinity of the city hall, for the action taken at the last meeting in regard to the purchasing of a fire alarm box which is needed at the citl building. The one which is now there was demolished several weeks ago when a man tried to open the box and finding it locked broke it into smithereens with a brick.

With no alarm box at the city hall any residence in the Second ward might burn to the ground before the fire department could be called out. The council gave shortage of money as a reason for not buying a box. The citizens say that they seemed to forget the shortage when they ordered several streets paved.

VESTIBULED TRAINS

Chief Train Dispatcher Rodgers attended the meeting of the officials of the C. & P. Railroad company at Pittsburg Tuesday and states that the officials decided to give the traveling public on their road better accommodations soon by placing on the line six new vestibuled, well equipped and strictly up-to-date coaches. The cars will be divided into two trains and will be installed on the afternoon run; that is, one train will pass Wellsville for Cleveland at 3:02 p. m. and the other will pass for Pittsburg at 5:30 p. m.

It is not known definitely when the cars will be placed on the road, as they have not yet been built. However, they have been ordered and will likely be finished not later than June 1.

CANDLES.

Their Mellow Light Is Fast Becoming but a Memory.

So markedly is the candle going out of use that the dictionary of a few years hence will probably have to supplement its definition with an illustration. In the glow of electric light, gas and paraffin we are much disposed to pity our immediate forefathers who had to put up with candles.

Yet we retain a strange respect for the candle in certain directions. When we wish to pay the highest reverence, we fall back upon it. The death chamber is lighted with candles. So is the church altar. We cannot but be forced also to the conclusion that higher ideas have been brought out and better matter written by candlelight than have been or probably ever will be by that of gas or electricity.

Shakespeare could not possibly have written all his plays by daylight. Indeed, it is more than probable that the touch of bohemianism in his composition, as in that of his watered down literary descendants today, preferred night to day for turning out its best work. Hamlet's soliloquy upon the existing value of things, Portia's tribute to mercy and the advice of Polonius to Laertes as to the best way of conducting himself in life were probably written between the snuffings of a candle. In particular can one imagine the decisive snuffing and the contemptuous tossing away of the scrap of burned wick at the close of the passage hypothetically disposing of "Cæsar's imperial day."—London Globe.

Quaint Plea For a Pension.

All sorts of special pleas have been made in applications for pensions. One of the most ludicrous was made in Portland. When the applicant was asked is he ever served in the army or navy, he said, "No." Asked as to what grounds he based his application on, he said that he was in eastern Oregon when the Indians went on the warpath; that in making for a point of safety he and some other men were attacked by the Indians, one of the other men being killed and another wounded. He escaped on account of the fleetness of his horse, but the encounter caused him such excitement that he had had occasional fits ever since, and on account of the fits he thought he was entitled to a pension.—Portland Oregonian.

SOUTH SIDE

List of Standing Committees Made Known—Safe Contract Canceled.

The meeting of the city council last evening was of exceedingly short duration, which was attributed to the absence of Mayor Shrader, who was confined to his home with a serious cold. The remaining members were present and opened the meeting by electing J. S. D. Mercer as president pro tem. The minutes of the meeting held Saturday night were read and revealed the names of the men appointed on the several committees. They are:

Street committee—Johnston, Riley and Wells.

City Property Committee—Riley, Hough and Wetzel.

Light Committee—Hough, Wells and Johnston.

Mr. Riley, as chairman of the city property committee, stated that they had cancelled the order for the $123 safe to be purchased from the Milligan Hardware company. He thinks the price to have been paid was too much and that a second-handed safe costing $30 will answer the purpose just as well. He knows of one which can be bought for the latter price which has only been used five years and is in excellent condition.

The city property committee was instructed to order the gas company to immediately place heat and light in the city building. This committee was also commissioned to purchase four cots and other supplies for the proper equipping of the city jail.

Mr. Riley thought that council should name the salaries to be paid the solicitor, street commissioner and city marshal, but the matter was deferred until the next regular meeting, which will be held on Thursday evening, February 13.

COAL SHIPPING FACILITIES

Will Be Greatly Improved By a Proposed New Pennsylvania Line.

The facilities for shipping coal from the recently developed fields on Raccoon creek will be extensively improved. The Wabash has a line nearly completed which connects the field with the river ports and the Pennsylvania company proposes to build a line from the terminus of the Washington & Western to the river, near Wellsburg, a distance of 35 miles. The new road will traverse Raccoon creek and the greater part of the distance it will parallel the Wabash road.

Hancock Farmers' Institute.

The farmers' institute of Hancock county will meet in the town hall at Fairview next Monday and Tuesday. Among the prominent persons who will be present are Alva Agee, of Cheshire, O., representative of the Pittsburg Stockman, and Abram McCulloch, of Clinton, W. Va., of the department of agriculture.

If locations can be obtained in Chester two new stores will be installed in the near future. Alvin Betts, of Unionport, and Mr. Malbar, of Warren, have written Geo. H. Owen & Co. regarding a location and have intimated that they are desirous of starting business in the city.

Fire Clay Works to Start.

The Parke Fire Clay company will start its works at Kenilworth next Monday. The works have been closed for several days in order to make some necessary improvements. J. C. Penny has arrived from Allegheny and will be night watchman at the works.

A Dance Tonight.

A large number of Chester and Cumberland young people will attend the dance to be given at the home of Jacob Glasss, near Washington school house, tonight. The Chester crowd will use a sleigh as their conveyance and a great time is expected.

A Business Man's Experience In Hiring an Office Assistant.

A business man said that he once devoted half a day to hiring a man whom he needed in his office. In answer to his advertisement a great many applicants called. He rejected the first because he would not look him in the eye. "The second man," said the merchant, "was armed with a double barreled recommendation from his pastor, with testimonials as to his business ability and good character; but, though he looked me in the eye, I saw that we could never hope to get along well together, and so I dismissed him. The third interested me the moment he stepped inside the door. He was poorly dressed, and, though his clothes were whole, they were at least two sizes too small. It was evident that his attire troubled him not the least, for he held his head high and as he approached my desk looked me squarely in the eye. He said that he had no recommendation, that he had no business experience, but that he was willing to do his best to please me. In an instant it dawned upon me that before me was the man that I was looking for. He had nothing to recommend him save an honest, bright eye and a pleasant face, but that was sufficient. I engaged him on the spot.

"Since then I have seen fit to advance him over a man who had been with me three years. The latter grumbled, but there was reason for my move—the new man had proved himself worthy of promotion."

Instances might be definitely multiplied of the value of an honest eye. That wonderful window of the soul, the eye, is a sure index to character. If you have it not, cultivate a bright, honest, straightforward look. It will more than repay your effort. Look up and fearlessly meet the eyes of those with whom you converse. Many a choice position has been lost through an indifferent, flinching eye, and many a coveted position has been won through a fearless, honest eye. That kind of eye is better than a hundred recommendations.—Success.

SOLVING A PROBLEM.

The Green Country Brakeman Who Introduced the "Saw By."

Many years ago a green country boy applied to the superintendent of a western railway for work and, somewhat against the superintendent's wish, on account of the danger to life and limb attendant upon such occupation, was given a place as brakeman of a freight train.

On one of his first trips it happened that his train met another freight train at a station where the sidetrack was not long enough to accommodate either of them. The conductors were debating which train should back up to a point where they could pass when the new hand ventured to suggest that neither should back; that they could pass each other by means of the short sidetrack if the thing was managed right.

The idea excited a good deal of laughter on the part of the old trainmen, but the boy stood his ground.

"Well, how would you go about it?" asked one of the conductors, confident that the lad would soon find himself against a stump.

The boy took up a stick and traced in the sand a diagram to illustrate his plan.

"Good gracious!" said the conductor. "I believe that will do it!"

And it did do it. Today every trainman in America probably knows how to "saw by" two long trains on a short sidetrack, but it is not so generally known that the thing was never done until an inexperienced country boy who became the manager of a great railway line worked out the problem for himself.

Betrayed His Ignorance.

"I wish to get a position as brakeman," said the caller respectfully.

The great man sized him up. "Um. Ever have any experience?"

"Sir, I have been a railroad man for eighteen years."

The great man reflected some. "Um," he said. "Er—would you kindly close the door? I seem to feel a draft."

The applicant arose and closed the door gently.

"Huh!" snorted the great man. "Thought you could impose on me, eh? Get right out o' here! A railroad man would have shut that door so hard it would have jarred my false teeth out!"

"I must get some word from her," he said after much pacing of the floor. "There must be serious danger or he would not stay so long."

Elmendorf pointed out the obvious possibility that Kendall might long since have answered Miss Maclane's summons and have gone upon any of a hundred other duties, but Alden would not be thus quieted. He went out to the office to ask in what way he could communicate with the doctor, and within a minute after his departure Kendall entered the room.

He had a large glass jar in his hand, which seemed to contain milk. This he set down upon the table and immediately touched an electric button.

"How is she?" asked Elmendorf in a tone betraying the most earnest solicitude.

"Better, better," replied Kendall. "I think there's no longer any danger. Where is Mr. Alden?"

"No longer any danger!" exclaimed Elmendorf, ignoring the question. "Has there been any?"

"Well," said Kendall, "she fainted again."

"Again!"

"The first time was just before you came up," said Kendall. "Don't say anything about this. We had just given her a little luncheon, and I thought perhaps she might have had some small stomach trouble; oppresses the heart sometimes, you know. But I don't like this second attack Heart failure after the injury and the nervous exhaustion wouldn't be the most unlikely thing in the world, you know. Ah! Come here, George."

The last words were addressed to a youth in uniform who had answered the doctor's ring. Kendall gave him some money and whispered to him near the door. When he turned, as George departed, he saw Elmendorf standing rigid, with his blue eyes unusually wide open.

"What do you want of two white mice?" he demanded.

"Really, now"— Kendall began.

"Look here," interrupted Elmendorf. "If there's anything of that kind going on, I'm the man you need. Don't hide anything from me; for the little girl's sake, don't do it, doctor."

Kendall bit his lips and hesitated. Then he said suddenly, as steps were heard in the hall:

"Get him out of here and come back."

Alden entered and stopped short, in his own peculiar fashion, with his eyes on the doctor.

"It's all right," said Kendall. "Miss Miller showed some indications of weakness, but is doing nicely now. I should think you might see her about 5 o'clock."

"Well, doctor, I'm glad everything's all right," said Elmendorf. "I began to be anxious, you were so long away. But what you've said has made me feel easy again, and so I think the best thing that Mr. Alden and I can do is to try to get some light on Mr. Robinson's strange conduct. The man may have struck some kind of a clew and have rushed right off to verify it without waiting to consult anybody."

"I didn't think of that," responded Alden. "It may be that you've found the explanation."

"I would suggest that you go to his house," said Elmendorf. "Meanwhile I'll telephone to your office and one or two other places and see if I can get track of him. But the likeliest place is his house. Wait there for me. I'll join you before 3."

This arrangement was agreed upon, and the two men went out together. Elmendorf was busy with the telephone for half an hour, but he failed

Returning to the hospital, he went at once to Kendall's room. In answer to his rap and the sound of his voice the door was unlocked and he was admitted. In passing he glanced searchingly at Kendall's face, which wore an expression of extreme anxiety; then he advanced to the table in the middle of the room, from which he lifted a newspaper, thus revealing the bodies of two little white mice.

"Good Lord!" he gasped. "You don't mean it?"

Kendall nodded. Then he sat down and rested his head on his hands for a few seconds, while Elmendorf gathered breath and heart for the next question.

"What was in the jar—milk?"

"No," replied Kendall. "It is a kind of liquid food preparation. The basis of it is milk; but, unfortunately," he added, looking up at the detective, "it will keep."

"Been in the room several days, you mean?" said Elmendorf. "If it was ordinary milk that had been dosed, we could narrow it down to a few hours. But this stuff—why, absolutely everybody connected with the case has had a chance at it."

"How shall I tell her?" muttered Kendall.

"Her?"

The doctor gave a nervous start.

"Miss Maclane," he said. "This will be a hard story for her to hear."

"You are right," replied Elmendorf, "after all the care she's taken, the devotion she's shown to that poor child, who was nothing to her—worse than nothing, in fact—an enemy, you might say."

"Now, look here"— exclaimed Kendall hoarsely as he got upon his feet.

"No, no!" cried Elmendorf. "I don't mean to accuse her. That would be absurd. We mustn't waste time. What was the poison?"

"I don't know," replied Kendall. "Of course there was no time for analysis. That's why I tried it on these small animals. It's some kind of a heart depressant—the very thing to use in a case of this kind, where the condition is one of weakness and especially where there is an injury in the region of the organ."

"But didn't these mice show any symptoms that you could recognize?" asked Elmendorf.

"No; nothing definite I could name several poisons that would answer all the requirements. It isn't necessary to know immediately. The treatment would be the same in any case. And the danger is over, I believe."

"Unless it's somewhere else," said Elmendorf; "in her medicines, perhaps."

"That wouldn't be possible without assuming something that can't be assumed—not in my presence, at any rate."

"You mean that Miss Maclane"—

"Precisely," said Kendall. "And as there can be no thought of such a thing we conclude that this infernal thing"—and he tapped the jar with his knuckles—"which was handy for everybody, wide mouthed and all that—Oh, I have been an idiot!"

"She's been having this right along," said Elmendorf. "That might indicate"—

"Nothing until we know just what the stuff is and how much of it we have to deal with," replied Kendall. "The effects observed may come from what she ate this noon or be the general result of small, repeated doses."

"There's one thing," said Elmendorf with decision—"this villainous act must have been done by somebody who knew that the food was there, by some one who had been in the room several times"—

"Don't!" groaned Kendall. "By heavens, I can't bear to think of it! I like Alden. I can't believe this of him. And—and she loves him; she loves him just as much now as ever."

"Miss Maclane?" said Elmendorf. "My friend, I don't believe it."

Kendall looked up at him with a blank stare and shook his head.

CHAPTER XVI.

ELSIE PERPETRATES A JEST.

"THEY say," remarked Elsie, "that people always feel particularly well just before they die. Do you remember Bernhardt in 'Camille,' the very last words before she dies in Armand's arms: 'I shall live! Ah, how well I feel!' How I cried when she said that! And then Gaston says, 'She sleeps.' Isn't that a lovely scene?"

"As it came to your mind at this moment," said Brenda, "I joyfully infer that you are feeling very much better."

"You must think I am silly to talk so much about dying," said Elsie. "I am soggy with sentimentality."

"You have mentioned it on just four occasions," said Brenda, "including this, but it seems often to us because we don't wish to lose you and to yourself because really and truly you don't wish to die. On the whole, you have been as cheerful as any girl could possibly be under the circumstances, and as for your sentimentality, my dear, I'd give the world to have some of it myself."

"I was going to say," continued Elsie, "that my motive for continually harping on it is that you may know I am not afraid, and afterward you may tell Mr. Alden."

This exchange of pleasantries upon a cheerful subject occurred during the time when Kendall was experimenting with the white mice.

"I must have been pretty near it the last time," said Elsie. "It was double. I scarcely knew what was the matter when it began, even though I'd fainted such a little while before. It was like drifting, drifting away. You are surprised. You think you must stop, and before you really have time to be frightened you are gone. But I waked just for a second—just long enough to remember and realize; then down, down, down, sideways to the left there, slipping away from the room and the light. The last was a sensation that they were lowering me into the ground. But I'm going to be cremated. You've promised me that, Brenda."

Then, catching the expression of amused horror — if that can be — on Brenda's face, she laughed with the most delicious and clear sound, like the singing of birds.

"Oh, but it hurts to laugh," she said. "You mustn't make me do it."

"I?" cried Brenda. "You're the first that ever accused me of being amusing."

"Do you know," said Elsie, "that of the two of us you're the blue one? It's much more cheerful to talk about dying than to 'roast' oneself as you do."

"Roasting is popularly supposed to be one step beyond dying," replied Brenda. "But I suppose the roasting you mean is the saying of uncomplimentary things. My child, I can't help it; I suffer by contrast."

"With me?" cried Elsie. "Now you really are amusing. If I had your hair and eyes! Well, that's absurd, of course. But do you know I lie here imitating your ways, your calm, gentle, sweet way of doing things? I'm studying you, Brenda, and if I were to play a society part again you'd see! This is the way you say: 'Good morning, Dr. Kendall. * * * Ah, thank you so much. * * * Shall we see you again soon? * * * Goodby.' You make all the little things mean something. That's dignity, personality. I haven't any more than a blade of grass, but I'm gaining on it. If I live another week, I shall die and go to Daniel Frohman's No. 1 company instead of to heaven. I'd rather."

"Do I speak like that when I address Dr. Kendall?" said Brenda, with a slight access of color. "Well, it may be so. You are very clever, my dear."

"This is the way you hold your arms when you walk," said Elsie. "Isn't that pretty? Of course I can't do it very well lying down, but see the fingers and the ease of the wrist. Were you taught to do that?"

"I used to have a governess who was crazy on Delsarte," replied Brenda. "But she presently went crazy on all other subjects also, and we had to send the poor thing to an institution. I was not aware of my debt to her."

"You owe her a great deal," said Elsie. "I wish I'd had a lunatic of that kind in my family. I couldn't afford to have much teaching. Of course I had some, but when I found what my mother was enduring in order to pay for it—well, I took an engagement with the first thing that came along. And it was a barnstorming crew! We gave six plays a week, and I had to learn a long part in every one of them. The second Monday, in the afternoon, the leading lady came into my room and found me huddled up on the floor in the corner gibbering—just gibbering, that was all—words out of all the plays, as she told me afterward, all jumbled together, and I was cross eyed with sitting up all night studying under little flickering gas jets. Yes, that's the way she found me, and the room was as cold as a barn too. I had the bed quilt wrapped around my shoulders and my arm through a hole in it.

"The leading lady yelled to the juvenile man, and he really was juvenile—about 18, as I remember. She said, 'Go get a glass of brandy!' The juvenile man went down to the bar and came back with a tumbler solid full. He had to carry it carefully in order to keep from spilling any. The leading lady was a temperance woman. She never touched a drop of wine, and, in fact, she was a regular straitlaced New England pilgrim, but somebody had told her once that brandy was good for the thing that I had—'white brain,' we call it. The juvenile man didn't know how much brandy a person ought to take, and I—well, I didn't know anything. So I drank it all, and then I lay down on the bed, and the leading lady covered me with everything she could find, and pretty soon the bed got up and stood on the ceiling, and I didn't care at all.

"When it came time to go to the theater (Brenda, it's disgraceful, but I was so—so drunk that I couldn't walk straight) the leading lady got me up and told the juvenile man to walk me around the block, and he walked me around about fifty times in the snow. We were in a little Minnesota town, and it had snowed for a week. When he took me to the theater, I was perfectly sober, and I didn't care for anything. I had no troubles whatever. I walked up to the stage manager, and I said cheerfully, 'Well, what do we play tonight?' He told me, and I couldn't remember ever to have heard of it, but I got out my part and studied it while I was making up.

"When I went on, I knew about half of my first scene, which was the longest one I had in the play. But I didn't care. I'd always been troubled with stage fright more or less, but not this time—not a fright. When I forgot, I waited calmly for the prompter, who was off left, having a fit. By and by I had to go across right and sit down by a table. I knew I couldn't hear the prompter there, so I walked over and got the table and dragged it clear across the stage, and the audience applauded because I did it so naturally.

"Then I went crazy, and what happened afterward I scarcely know. But when I came off after the thrilling climax of the scene I fell into the leading lady's arms, and she hugged me up tight. She said: 'You never played so well as that before. You were like Julia Marlowe.' And she kissed me on both cheeks. Julia Marlowe was my idol then, and I cried with heavenly joy on the leading lady's neck. That's all true, just as it happened, Brenda, and I never had stage fright afterward."

"Poor little Elsie!" said Brenda, kissing her. "It was a hard school where you were taught."

"It was," said Elsie. "Yet I think I wouldn't have amounted to much anyway. How could any mortal man fail to see the difference between you and me?"

"My child," said Brenda, "no man can. Why, the brass knobs on the posts of this bed know the difference between you and me—the vital, essential difference. They love you in their little brass hearts. Everybody loves you. Dr. Kendall, for a cold blooded sawyer of bones who could amputate my head without a trace of emotion, takes your hand with the eternal reverence of man for woman, and when he gives you pain I can see his own heart shrink. But he treats me as if I were a gentleman whom he had met at the club."

Elsie opened her eyes so wide that they seemed to light the room as she stared at Brenda, whose cheeks were flushed by her unusual earnestness.

"I am glad to hear you speak like that," she said.

Brenda rose and walked across to the window. Then she returned to the bed and took Elsie's hand.

"I am going to open my heart to you," she said. "It was not because Clarence Alden preferred you to me that I lost my self control that last day. I cared nothing for you, despised you; I admitted no comparison. It was because, though the intensity of his own nature for a time deceived him, he never really loved me at all. Nobody ever loved me. I am called good looking, even a beauty, in the society columns of the papers, and I am so rich that I have attracted many men. But not one of them was able to present even a creditable counterfeit of love (though some of them could counterfeit almost anything else, from good breeding to the national currency) until Mr. Alden entered the lists. That's hardly fair to him; he was sincere, but mistaken."

"Yet I didn't have at all the feeling that I have now," she continued. "It was only that last day that I became enraged, mostly at myself. It is since I have come here, since I have known you, the most womanly of God's creatures, that I have had some true comprehension of my own lack, some honest sorrow for it."

"Only since you have been here," said Elsie. "How remarkable! But, Brenda, it is sweet of you to talk this way to me, and I am so glad, so very glad! How long have you known Dr. Kendall?"

"What a queer question!" said Brenda. "About two years, but we haven't met a dozen times. By the way, he is going to be married."

"He is going to be married!" exclaimed Elsie. "To whom?"

"I don't know," Brenda replied. "From something he said the other day, I judge there's a difficulty. I don't know the lady's name."

"Well," said Elsie, letting her head sink back on the pillow as one relieved, "you will when it happens."

"If you mean that he cares anything for me, you are quite mistaken," said Brenda. "His manner when he is in this room should show that. I am nothing—a piece of furniture. Do you know, it has inspired me with something like jealousy—jealousy merely of the difference between you and me, which is the theme we started with."

"I'll show you what Dr. Kendall thinks of that difference," said Elsie. "Wait till he comes in here again. I'll suggest that you're going away, and then you watch him. He'll know that I'm going to stay till I'm carted away. But watch him."

"You must not do it," said Brenda. But Elsie insisted that she should, and they were still having a cheerful little quarrel about it when they were interrupted by Kendall's familiar rap.

You Cannot Extirpate Ideas By Legislation

I THINK we assume a little too much if we make the mistake of congratulating ourselves on the present state of our society and on our position in it. The aristocracy and nobility of France took the same position before the revolution in regard to what they called their rights. But was it not their lives which caused the revolution? The nobles amused themselves in luxury and wealth while the people starved. WHO WERE THE ANARCHISTS? THE PEOPLE OR THEY?

I recall a few years ago, during the period of depression, when thousands of men were without work, a meeting of workingmen in Tompkins square, New York city. Four platforms had been built, and from each of them speakers were addressing the people on the rights of labor and suggesting methods for obtaining work for the unemployed. The audience crowded the square.

Suddenly a squad of policemen entered the square. They clubbed men, women and children indiscriminately. No attempt was made to arrest anybody because no law had been violated.

Now, suppose you had been clubbed just because you had been standing in the square listening to one of the speakers. On your way to the hospital to have your wounds dressed do you think that you could have been very ecstatic about the present government?

Anarchy is madness. Its theories are subversive of law and order. In practice they lead to murder and plunder, and no right thinking man can advocate them.

If we look back to the time following the assassination of President McKinley and the hectic excitement which prevailed then, we must confess that if ever anarchistic tendencies were expressed it was then.

One man—and he wore the garb that indicates the messenger of the Prince of Peace—even suggested that at the execution of Czolgosz all the power houses of the United States should be connected with the electric chair in order to make the execution a popular one.

IN OUR EFFORTS TO DEVISE LEGISLATION FOR REPRESSING ANARCHY THERE IS GRAVE DANGER THAT WE MAY GO TO THE OTHER EXTREME.

You cannot extirpate ideas by legislation. Laws never made men and women virtuous. Do not endeavor to repress an idea. If the idea is right, it will triumph, and the repressive methods will prove only so much fuel to feed the flame. When wrong, ideas die of themselves. IN DEALING WITH ANARCHY LET US REMEMBER THAT IF OUR GOVERNMENT IS FOUNDED ON RIGHTEOUSNESS THEN ANARCHY IS A CRAZE AND THIS CRAZE WILL PASS AS OTHER CRAZES HAVE IN THE WORLD'S HISTORY.

CONTROL RAILROADS

Various Recommendations Made In Behalf of Agriculturalists, One Being Extension of Rural Free Delivery—Final Report to Congress.

Washington, Feb. 7.—The industrial commission has submitted its final report to congress. It is a document of more than 1,000 printed pages. The first part, which has been made public, deals with the progress of the nation, agriculture, mining and transportation.

Recommendations are made on the subjects of transportation and agriculture. The commission advises as to transportation as follows in part:

"That the policy of governmental supervision and control of railroads, as originally laid down in the senate committee report of 1886 and embodied the following year in the interstate commerce act, be revived and strengthened; that the authority of the interstate commerce commission, necessary for the adequate protection of shippers and clearly intended by the framers of the law, be restored, and that the powers and functions of the commission be enlarged practically as contemplated in the so-called Cullom bill of 1900, except as to authority to prepare and enforce a uniform classification."

Agricultural Department Praised.

Prefacing its recommendations regarding agriculture, the commission says that agriculture has derived more benefit from the establishment of the department of agriculture and from its administrative work than from any other federal legislation.

It makes the following recommendations on this subject:

"That the secretary of agriculture be given authority—

"To inspect dairy products intended for export and to certify to their grade and quality.

"To fix standard grades for cereals, based on season of growing, quality and weight per measure, and, when intended for export, to inspect and certify the same.

"To cause stock cars and stock yards to be cleaned and disinfected whenever he considers such action necessary.

"To make adequate regulations prohibiting the shipment of uninspected or dressed meat from one state to another or to foreign countries.

"To require and direct the proper disposition of diseased meat.

"That a more comprehensive penalty clause for shipping diseased meat be enacted.

"That a law be enacted to provide—

"For the inspection of nursery stock intended for interstate commerce or for export and prohibiting the transportation of diseased, infested or uninspected nursery stock, and for rules and regulations to govern the importation of nursery stock and fruit, and prohibiting the importation of diseased, infested, or uninspected nursery stock or fruit.

To Prevent Adulteration of Foods.

"That a pure food section in the chemistry division of the department of agriculture be established to prevent the adulteration, false branding and deceptive imitation of foods, beverages, candies, drugs and condiments in the District of Columbia and the territories, and for regulating interstate traffic therefor.

"That adequate legislation be enacted by the several states where needed to control such diseases as glanders, tuberculosis, etc.

"That whatever changes may be made by the tariff, by reciprocity or otherwise, adequate protection to the beet sugar industry be maintained.

"That increased appropriations be made by the congress for building sample stretches of improved roads in various sections of the country, so as to encourage the more rapid construction of such roads at state and local expense.

"That the system of free rural delivery be extended as commended by the postmaster general in his latest annual report.

"That the policy of setting aside forest preserves already inaugurated be extended and that the three bureaus of the government which have charge of the investigations and administrative work connected with forestry be consolidated."

Heated Discussion In Senate.

Washington, Feb. 7.—For four hours yesterday the senate had the Philippine tariff bill under discussion. The measure was completed, so far as the Philippine committee is concerned, all of the committee amendments being adopted. Several other amendments, however, will be offered, one or two being pending.

Toward the close of the session the discussion became heated. In response to a resolution offered several days ago by Mr. Rawlins, of Utah, the secretary of war transmitted to the senate the sedition laws enacted by the Philippine commission. They were read in full and immediately drew the fire of the opponents of the government's Philippine policy. Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts, expressed his astonishment that such laws should be enforced by the government authorities.

Mr. Foraker, of Ohio, had read from the revised statutes of the United States the laws of congress relating to the crime of treason and similar offenses against the government and said the acts passed by the Philippine commission were almost identical in their language as those enacted by congress in the days of the fathers of the republic and that there was nothing unprecedented or unusual about them.

The Ohio senator was interrupted continually and had several warm colloquies with senators who were opposing him. In one of them he announced with great earnestness that the American army never would return from the Philippines until it returned victorious, and that gentlemen, in and out of congress, rail about it as they might, ought to thoroughly understand that fact.

In conclusion of the debate Mr. Hoar poured oil on the troubled waters of the senate, maintaining that men might well differ on any of the great questions now before the country, but that all were thoroughly loyal to the country and were doing their duty as they saw it.

Early in the day Mr. Scott, of West Virginia, delivered a speech, in which he advocated an investigation of the San Blas route for an isthmian canal, and Mr. Hansbrough made a carefully prepared address on his bill to provide a national system of irrigation of arid lands.

Portion of Taft's Testimony.

Washington, Feb. 7.—In continuing his testimony before the senate committee on the Philippines, Governor Taft said in part:

Taking up the subject of general taxation he said the commission is making an effort to make the customs tariff the only source of revenue, "and while," he said, "we should be glad to have free trade with the United States in order to insure the progress of agriculture, we cannot but feel that if it is fair to collect a tariff on goods coming into the Philippines from the United States it is only fair to provide for a tariff on Philippine articles coming into the United States.

"In our judgment the customs tax is absolutely necessary, as the government could not be supported by direct taxation. Of course, if there were no customs collection on goods coming from the United States, the effect would be to nullify all tariff collections, as practically all the importations into the Philippines would be from the United States or from Spain, which would also be given free trade under the peace treaty."

He said that the tariff adopted by the commission is a specific duty, amounting to from 15 to 30 per cent. reduced to an ad valorem system, and that the effort had been to place the higher tariff on luxuries and the lower on necessities, thus reversing the Spanish system.

Refunding of Porto Ricon Duties.

Washington, Feb. 7.—Mr. Tracewell, the comptroller of the treasury, has rendered a decision involving the question of the refunding of duties on goods imported from Porto Rico. The decision is given at the request of the secretary of the treasury, who asked as to his authority to refund moneys paid as duties, or as a fine equal to the duty, no protest having been filed against the assessment of these duties, on certain merchandise brought into this country from Porto Rico, after the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain and before the taking effect of the act of April 12, 1900.

The comptroller holds in effect that where no protests have been filed no duties can be refunded on goods imported from Porto Rico between April 11, 1899, and May 1, 1900. All applications for the refunding of duties where no protests have been filed must be sent to the secretary of the treasury for certification to congress for appropriation.

To Bar Competition of Marine Band.

Washington, Feb. 7.—The house committee on labor yesterday reported favorably the bill of Representative Bartholdt, of Missouri, to prevent the United States Marine band and other army and navy bands from competing with civilian bands or individuals. Mr. Bartholdt says in his report that the members of the army and navy bands are under the pay of the government; their subsistence is provided for by the government; their uniforms and instruments and all the necessary sheet music and other paraphernalia are paid for out of the national treasury, all of which affords them a considerable advantage and easily enables them to underbid citizen musicians on all occasions where music is to be furnished under contract. He points out that this bill will not interfere with the playing of the Marine band at the White House or on all governmental occasions.

Rapid Progress Made on Bill.

Washington, Feb. 7.—The house spent the day on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill. Very rapid progress was made, 74 of the 130 pages of the bill being disposed of before adjournment. No debate of importance developed during the consideration of the bill and no amendments of importance were adopted.

Correspondence Sent to Senate.

Washington, Feb. 7.—The official correspondence relating to the tariff matters in the Philippines called for by the senate was sent to that body yesterday by the war department. The correspondence is very voluminous and includes all the numerous reports and documents which have been made public by the war department for the last two years.

FIND THE CHAPERON.

MISS HELEN HAY A BRIDE.

United in Marriage to Payne Whitney—Revs. Hamlin and Hayden Officiated.

Washington, Feb. 7.—Miss Helen Hay and Payne Whitney were married at noon yesterday in the Church of the Covenant, the Rev. T. F. Hamlin, pastor of the church, and the Rev. H. C. Hayden, of Cleveland, officiating.

The ceremony was witnessed by President Roosevelt, the diplomatic corps, representatives of the army and navy in the full dress of their ranks, and hundreds of distinguished members of society in the national capital and other cities. Members of congress, the judiciary and nearly all the high officials of the government in Washington were present.

The decorations of the church were of white lillies and roses, vines and palms. Ropes of roses surrounded the section occupied by the presidential party and the aisles likewise were garlanded with floral strands.

The bride being in mourning for her brother Adelbert, her gown was of plain white satin en train, a veil of tulle, caught with a spray of orange blossoms, falling to the hem. She wore neither lace nor jewels. Her maids, Misses Alice Hay and Dorothy Whitney, were gowned in pale gray crepe de chine over white taffeta and wore picture hats of white felt, with ostrich plumes. They carried white roses. Mr. Whitney was attended by Eugene Hale, Jr., while the ushers were Henry Clews, Jr., Fred Kernochan, J. N. Waterbury, M. S. Berger and Governor Morris, all of New York city; James N. Wadsworth, Jr., of Genesco, N. Y.; H. P. Scott, of Philadelphia, and Major Charles McCawley.

The following selections were played on the organ during the service: Pilgrim chorus, "The Evening Star," Tanhauser; processional march of the Master Singers, "The Prize Song," Die Meistersinger; "Wedding March," Dudley Buck; "The Swan Song," Elsa entering the cathedral; introduction to third act and wedding music, Lohengrin; march from "Midsummer's Night Dream," Mendelssohn.

After the ceremony a breakfast was served at the residence of Secretary and Mrs. Hay, at which only the immediate relatives and friends of the families of the bride and groom were present, with the exception of President and Mrs. Roosevelt. President Roosevelt toasted the bride at the breakfast. The room was elaborately decorated with white roses, as was every room in the house open to the guests.

Among the gifts to the bride was a diamond and pearl necklace from Colonel Oliver Payne, uncle of the groom. Colonel Payne also presented the couple with a fine residence near his own in Fifth avenue, New York, and a country house at Tuxedo.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitney will be the guests of Colonel Payne at Thomasville, Ga., for a month. Then after a visit of a few weeks at the home of the bride's parents they will go to Europe for the summer. Returning in the fall they will make their home in New York.

A HUNDRED CONVERSIONS

Services at the M. E. church were well attended again last night. Dr. Crawford took as his subject, "The Power of God's Word." He said in part:

"In the scriptures the word of God is illustrated in various ways to indicate its power over human hearts. There is something in it which brings its own evidence. This word is powerful in the day of its first utterance, is still mighty in discovering to us the secrets of the human heart. It shows us our needs and reveals to us the remedy for that need—Jesus Christ."

Tonight there will be special praise service at the M. E. church. Dr. Crawford will preach a short sermon and Prof. and Mrs. Phillis will provide special music. The meeting will take on the character of a praise and thanksgiving service. Since the beginning of the meetings there have been about 100 conversions and many have joined the church.

MRS. SOFFEL WORSE

The Prompt Administering of Stimulants Prevented a Collapse.

COMPLICATING DISEASE FEARED.

Dr. McAdoo Thought There Was Grave Danger of Low Grade of Fever or Tuberculosis — Richard Scandrett Consents to Be Attorney.

Butler, Pa., Feb. 7.—Mrs. Kate Soffel was yesterday nearer death than at any other time since being taken to the Butler county hospital.

For several hours her condition was grave, but by prompt medical attention and the heroic administration of stimulants a collapse was prevented. Last night she was sleeping rather fitfully under the influence of opiates and was said to have shown some improvement, but the danger had not by any means passed.

One of the chief factors in reviving the patient's drooping spirits was the visit yesterday afternoon of her sister, Mrs. Jacob Miller, of Pittsburg, who brought a cheering message of some kind. Mrs. Miller also told Mrs. Soffel that Attorney Richard B. Scandrett, of Pittsburg, has consented to become her legal adviser. The hospital attendants said last night that Mr. Scandrett is expected here today and they will have the prisoner in readiness for his coming. Assistant District Attorney John S. Robb, Jr., is also expected.

Dr. George K. McAdoo last night thought her convalescence will be prolonged, and that there is grave danger of complicating disease, such as a low grade of fever or tuberculosis.

One of the developments of yesterday in Mrs. Soffel's condition was the peeling off of the skin on her arms and limbs, due to a frost-bitten condition of her body.

DIRECT EVIDENCE ADMITTED.

Clearfield, Pa., Feb. 7.—The Harris-Meek case went to trial yesterday morning.

Judge Gordon, after a long and interesting legal battle, ruled that no testimony could be admitted which does not directly connect Harris with the alleged corruption of the last legislature, either as receiving money or other valuable thing for his vote or influence as a member.

Notwithstanding the ruling of Judge Gordon, the defense got a vast amount of damaging allegations to the jury. The opening address of ex-Judge Krebs was a complete recital of alleged fraud and corruption attending the organization and the election of Quay, the passage of the Pittsburg and Philadelphia "rippers," the fifth court and the franchises.

FLAT BUILDING DESTROYED.

Tenants Escaped—Two Firemen and Policeman Injured.

Chicago, Feb. 7.—The 'Varsity flat building, situated at the southeast corner of Sixtieth street and Ellis avenue, and near the Chicago university buildings, was destroyed by fire last evening, entailing an aggregate loss upon the owner of the structure and the tenants of $160,000.

During the fire an explosion of gasoline in a grocery store, located in the building, hurled Fireman James Tillman from the fire escape on the second story to the ground, breaking his thigh and injuring him internally. Robert Hartley, another fireman, was thrown from a window in the second story and his head was badly cut. He was also badly burned by the explosion. Policeman John Coale, who was in the grocery at the time of the explosion, was thrown down and badly burned about the face.

The tenants all got out safely.

PROMINENT GUESTS AT DINNER FOR THE SCHWABS.

AN EXCESS OF ANIMATION

In the Stock Market, Thursday—Dealings Better Distributed Than For Some Time Past.

New York, Feb. 7.—The stock market showed considerable excess of animation Thursday and the dealings were much better distributed than for some time past. There were stocks which hung back and some which fell away on profit taking after recent considerable advances, but the general tone of the market was strong and speculative sentiment seemed much more confident. There was a feeling that the improved conditions were due to some development not generally known, and the professional traders, who, in fact, did not know what they were, were among the largest buyers on the supposition that others who did know were in the market with them. These surmises had to do to a large extent with possible developments in the suit against the Northern Securities company. Confident expressions were heard, but on anonymous authority, that the decision of the supreme court was made up against the admission of the suit to argument. The supposition also found expression that the projectors of the great merger have an alternative plan to fall back on in case of the declared illegality of the present company. It was argued that a foreign corporation might hold the securities of United States corporations and be outside the jurisdiction of the United States laws. Of the day's movements in detail, Southern Pacific was largely in the hands of the same speculative interest which has been dealing in it recently, and the movement in Pennsylvania was also attributed to this operator. The Vanderbilts, as a group, were all strong, and the Toledo, St. Louis and Western stocks moved in sympathy with the group on rumored absorption in the Vanderbilt interest. The gains in these stocks reached up to 6 points, Lake Erie and Western preferred showing the latter figure. Illinois Central was also strong on the general consideration of its price level as compared with other equal dividend payers. There were a number of lower priced and less prominent stocks whose special strength was attributed to increasing dividend prospects. Profit taking made the closing somewhat irregular, but the inroads upon prices were not extensive.

The bond market was active and broad and showed general advances. Total sales, par value, $4,055,000.

U. S. 3s declined ¼ per cent on the last call.

RODE FOURTEEN MILES IN THE LOCOMOTIVE CAB.

Akron, O., Feb. 7.—The nine passengers, on an eastbound Northern Ohio railroad train arrived in Akron on the engine of the train. The heavy drifts on the road caused a coupling to heat and at the conductor's suggestion the passengers, including both men and women, completed the trip to Akron in the locomotive. The engineer allowed the women to blow the whistle and ring the bell, during the ride of 14 miles.

Another Victim of Explosion.

New York, Feb. 7.—The coroner's office was notified of the death from shock of Edward C. Fiedler, of this city, at the Murray Hill hotel. Mr. Fiedler occupied a room on the third floor of the Murray Hill hotel on Jan. 27, at the time of the subway explosion. He was then convalescent from a long illness, and after the explosion suffered considerably from shock.

Rev. Dr. Baum Dead.

Philadelphia, Feb. 7.—The Rev. William Baum, D. D., pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran church, died at his home here of a complication of diseases, aged 77 years. Dr. Baum was for many years president of the Northern Home for Friendless Children, a trustee of the Pennsylvania college and a director of the theological seminary at Gettysburg.

Voices to Order.

A knowledge of the physiology of the human larynx has made it possible to supply artificial voices to persons who have been deprived of the one nature gave them, and a number of cases exist where the cavity has been opened and a larynx made of suitable material with rubber membranes has been inserted and become practically useful in speech.

Heavenly.

"Say," the girl's father called from above stairs, "this is an unearthly hour for that young man to be here, Mary!"

"You're right," responded the young man, who had just been accepted; "the hour is unearthly, sure enough; it's simply heavenly!"—Philadelphia Record.

Absolutely Original.

"Ah," said the great singer, "I have hit on a plan which will indeed bring me distinction."

"What it is?" asked a friend.

"I shall make a farewell tour, and—I shall not go back."—Answers.

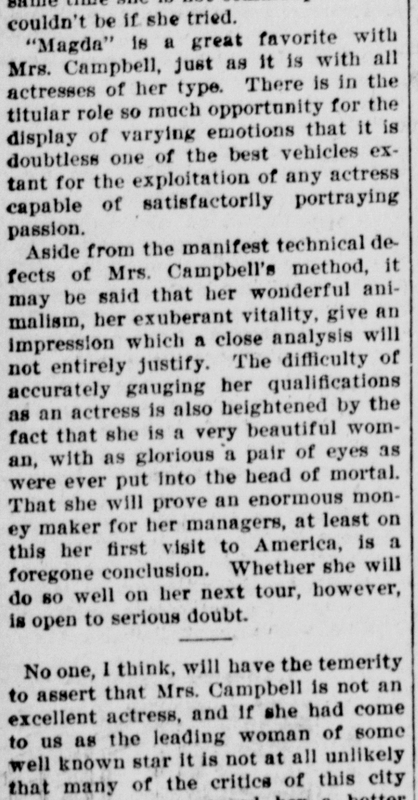

Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who is regarded by one section of the British press as the greatest English speaking actress and by another section as a very commonplace player, has been appearing before large audiences at the Theater Republic in this city. She has created the impression that her home folks have not yet correctly estimated her ability. She is by no means the greatest English speaking actress, even in the class of roles with which she has chosen to identify herself. At the same time she is not commonplace and couldn't be if she tried.

"Magda" is a great favorite with Mrs. Campbell, just as it is with all actresses of her type. There is in the titular role so much opportunity for the display of varying emotions that it is doubtless one of the best vehicles extant for the exploitation of any actress capable of satisfactorily portraying passion.

Aside from the manifest technical defects of Mrs. Campbell's method, it may be said that her wonderful animalism, her exuberant vitality, give an impression which a close analysis will not entirely justify. The difficulty of accurately gauging her qualifications as an actress is also heightened by the fact that she is a very beautiful woman, with as glorious a pair of eyes as were ever put into the head of mortal. That she will prove an enormous money maker for her managers, at least on this her first visit to America, is a foregone conclusion. Whether she will do so well on her next tour, however, is open to serious doubt.

No one, I think, will have the temerity to assert that Mrs. Campbell is not an excellent actress, and if she had come to us as the leading woman of some well known star it is not at all unlikely that many of the critics of this city would have pronounced her a better player than her principal, for, take it all in all, she is a greater artist than any recent English importation. By comparison with the ox eyed Nethersole, she is a veritable Duse in repression, a veritable whirlwind of passion. And yet Mrs. Campbell is at times almost crude in her exposition of passion, while of true repression she possesses not a tittle unless we choose to regard as repression her quietness of method in the lighter scenes.

Mrs. Campbell, I am convinced, would be really great in a play written especially for her by a conscientious author thoroughly familiar with her limitations as well as with her strong points and who was not afraid to openly take cognizance of the latter. But it is doubtful that such a dramatist exists, and if there be such a one it is not likely that an ambitious star would give him a commission for a play confessedly designed to be of a caliber which would not require the best efforts of at least a Bernhardt or a Duse.

In portions of that great "trial" play, "Magda," Mrs. Campbell is delightful, and it would be a difficult matter to name an actress capable of better work, but when the real test comes, when the deep conflicting emotions which must sway a woman of Magda's temperament in the situation in which she finds herself are to be shown, the English actress is wanting. Withal, however, she is pleasing even where she is least artistic, for Mrs. Campbell is one of those performers who never offend by venturing far afield from what they realize to be their vantage ground. When she gets to a scene which she must know is far beyond her strength, Mrs. Campbell simply pitches it in a key which, while somewhat below that in which it is written and somewhat above that in which she shows her best work, is at least a happy compromise between art and capability.

This is the critical, perhaps it may be said the hypercritical, view of Mrs. Patrick Campbell's quality as an actress. She will, as I have already said, please the average theater goer, but when the price of the best seats is put at $3 each it is an intimation that the star is regarded by herself and her exploiters as of the first magnitude and carries with it a tacit invitation to criticise her work from that standpoint.

Of Mrs. Campbell's company little need be said. On the whole, its work was satisfactory, although there were one or two woefully weak spots. Herbert Waring, who in London is regarded as an excellent actor, gave a performance of the one rascally character in "Magda" which would have won him undying fame if it had been done in comic opera.

This is the season when each week sees three or four New York theaters built—on paper. The funny part of it is that all of the houses are usually slated to occupy the same site. One is inevitably forced to the conclusion that some genius has invented a plan for erecting one building upon another, but that isn't the case. It is merely a bit of presswork upon the part either of some owner of real estate in the available section or of some theatrical manager who feels that his name is not appearing with sufficient frequency in those newspapers which employ those peculiar individuals known as "theatrical reporters." It is the duty of these men to haunt the theaters day and night for the purpose of picking up bits of misinformation which, it is fondly assumed, will be of interest to the readers of their papers. No matter what story a manager gives one of these fellows about his plan to erect a theater on Longacre square, which at present appears to be the favorite site for paper places of amusement, he prints it. As a consequence the square is lined with theatrical edifices, according to the drawings in the offices of various prominent theatrical manipulators.

As a fact, of the scores of theaters projected for this locality during the past couple of years, not one has progressed to the point of having a single shovelful of dirt for the cellar removed.

At last, however, we are really to have a new first class theater, for the announcement is made by Hyde & Behman, the Brooklyn managers, who have enough money to build a good many playhouses and who besides care nothing for the factitious advertising to be derived from bombastic announcements of impossibilities. Hyde & Behman, furthermore, will not build on Longacre square, preferring to remain at Herald square, in whose future as a theatrical center they have long had confidence, as evidenced by their erecting many years ago at the corner of Thirty-fifth street and Broadway the old Park theater, now known as the Herald Square. This house they still own.

Oscar Hammerstein, who has just leased his Republic theater for a term of years to David Belasco and who has a habit of actually building the theaters he announces, will transfer the scene of his architectural activities to Philadelphia. He promises to give the City of Brotherly Love a playhouse the like of which it has never seen; but, as Oscar is prone to make promises of that sort, perhaps it is best not to take him too seriously. Instead we may admit that he is responsible for some pretty good theaters and let it go at that.

And, by the way, the lease of the Theater Republic by David Belasco is apt to have an important bearing upon the drama in this city. Mr. Belasco is by no means a great dramatist, but that he is a great dramatic carpenter no one can deny. It is said to be his intention to devote the Republic primarily to his three stars, Mrs. Leslie Carter, David Warfield and Blanche Bates. He will tear out the monstrously ugly and almost ludicrously inconvenient front of the building and in the interior will make a number of important changes designed to add to the comfort and convenience of patrons. Any sort of modification in these directions will be appreciated by theater goers, for it would be difficult to find anywhere a playhouse of first class pretensions which is more uncomfortable to the people who make its continued existence possible than the Republic in its present form.

It is not to be expected that Mr. Belasco's advent into the ranks of theatrical managers will make for the elevation of the drama or even for the exploitation of its highest types. If he writes his own plays, they must of necessity be artificial, but Belasco has the unusual faculty of making his artificiality so attractive that to the casual auditor it seems almost real. Besides, he has ideas and the courage to give them a trial, and in these days of slavish "follow your leader" methods anything that holds out promise of individuality should be encouraged.

By EUGEN SANDOW, the Famous Strong Man

I NEVER touch drugs, and I never diet. To be strong does not mean that you must forego the common pleasures of life taken in moderation. On the contrary, I always enjoy them. THE SECRET IS EXERCISE—INTELLIGENT, CONSTANT EXERCISE. To know every muscle of the 363 or more and to develop them to the fullest capacity—this will overcome any physical ill. We have all of us our limitations, but we too often think we have reached them.

I would apply the same principle to the training of men of advanced years as I would to those in early prime, but perhaps not the same method. If a man finds at sixty that he is weak, he need only go to work to make himself strong, just like one half his years, but, of course, intelligently and from his own standpoint. I have had pupils of eighty years of age and built them up astonishingly.

Oh, it is never too late—never while there is life and will power. Cato learned Greek at eighty, did he not? And the late queen of England mastered Hindoostanee in her seventy-fifth year, I believe. Age has nothing to do with progress if the enthusiasm and will power are still there.

It is my ambition to revitalize the youth of this generation and make them physically fit for the highest duties. I have been at work in London for some years to this end preparing soldiers for the frontier and firemen for the crowded city.

Last September I gave gold, silver and bronze statuettes valued at 1,000 guineas for students of physical culture who showed the best results under my system. There were 150 competitors, and THE FIRST PRIZE WINNER WAS A POOR CLERK FROM NOTTINGHAM WHO EIGHTEEN MONTHS BEFORE WAS ORDERED TO GET OUT OF ENGLAND TO SAVE HIMSELF FROM THE RAVAGES OF CONSUMPTION. That man has every right to live to be a hundred years old, and every day of his life he will be in glorious physical health if he takes care of himself. That's what I would wish every young man in America to do. It is only a question of the mind—the mind, understand. The muscles will obey when the brain leads, never fear. Be patient and constant in exercise.

THE MAN WHO WOULD KEEP WELL MUST ACCUSTOM HIMSELF TO DAILY COLD SPONGE BATHS.

There is nothing more invigorating. It will create a proper appetite, not a false one. I eat little and often. It is folly to attempt to live on two meals a day, for one is sure to overeat—the great trouble with Americans. Your lunch system here is atrocious. It produces dyspeptics and makes men prematurely old. To eat six times a day and a little each time is better than one overwhelming meal.

Not a Sensible Man.

Daughter—Oh, mamma, I do wish I were pretty!

Mother—You needn't, dear. Sensible men think very little about beauty.

IN HIGH REPUTE

The Great Author and Physician Dr. A. W. Chase, Is Remembered In East Liverpool.

All over the world Dr. A. W. Chase's receipt book is known as also in many parts of this country his skill as a physician, and from the great success of his medicines the name will be handed down from generation to generation. Attempts are often made to sell other medicines over the reputation of the doctor—some go so far as to use the name "Chase," but they dare not use the initials, A. W., portrait or signature which is borne on every box of the genuine—the kind referred to by Mrs. George Hall, of No. 389 West Market street, East Liverpool, O., who says: "I was bilious, my head ached hard and constantly. There was a general feeling of weakness and depression. I was asked to use Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills, and did so getting them at Larkins' drug store, corner Sixth and East Market streets. The result was very good indeed, as the biliousness was overcome, the headaches cured and bodily and nerve strength furnished. Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment I can vouch for in burns as a fine application."

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are sold at 50 cents a box at dealers, or Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine company, Buffalo, N. Y. See that portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D., are on every package.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR
But at any price THE BEST

King Edward's announced determination to personally enter the horse racing arena next season has caused a pronounced interest in forthcoming English events. The American owners who are to speed their steeds on British tracks during the summer are resolved that Edward shall not monopolize the winning of stakes and have decided to put forth their strongest efforts to pluck the Derby and other big events from the sovereign's reach.

The racing duel between the American millionaires and England's king will be watched eagerly on both sides of the Atlantic. With the stables of James R. and Foxhall Keene, William C. Whitney, William K. Vanderbilt and Richard Croker on the "tight little isle" we shall not be at all anxious as to the outcome. These men possess some of the fastest pieces of horseflesh that ever faced a starter, and a repetition of last year's victories is confidently expected by Uncle Sam.

Lord Marcus Beresford, the London horse dealer and brother of Lord William Beresford, will be the active manager of the royal stable. Danny Maher will have the most important mounts.

Mr. Keene's strong stable consists of Conroy, winner as a three-year-old of the Brooklyn Handicap; Cap and Bells, who took the English Oaks; Chacornac, winner of the Futurity of 1898; Olympian, second in the latter event; Cheviro, winner of the Pendergast Stakes; Noonday, Kearsarge and other speedy horses

The top liners in Mr. Whitney's stable are Kilmarnock, Volodyovski and Nasturtium, and the leaders Mr. Croker now has in England are Minnie Dee, Dobbins, Americus and Rhoda B.

The most dangerous rivals of the British sovereign will be Mr. Keene and Mr. Whitney, who will also have a warm war between themselves for the best stakes offered on the English turf.

Different methods of holding golf sticks during play have long been the causes of discussion and disagreement in the world of drives and lofts. A proper grip is the first thing that a beginner should be taught, and on his success in this line depends his future triumph or failure. Almost every player differs from his associates in regard to grip, and consequently opinions are constantly clashing.

James Braid, the present champion of Great Britain, is undoubtedly the greatest living player of golf. He uses a grip which, he claims, is largely responsible for his victories and says that it has been particularly helpful in driving. Braid is probably the strongest and surest driver in the British isles, and it is doubtful if America will ever produce his equal in this respect.

Ted Blackwell, the amateur of St. Andrews, is Braid's most formidable driving rival in the kingdom. Blackwell's drives, however, while unusually long, are often wild and uncertain. As a steady driver Harry Vardon is perhaps second to Braid.

The three greatest golfers of the present period—Braid, Vardon and Taylor—all have their exclusive characteristics. While, as already stated, Braid's strength lies in his drive, Vardon's forte is general all around play and an ability to pull himself out of difficulties at critical moments. Taylor is particularly remarkable for his mashie shots in approaches.

The American Derby.

The American Derby, which is to be run in Chicago, will have $20,000 added money this year, and no changes will be made in the conditions. There are no reduced forfeits. By this scheme the Derby will be worth about $25,000 gross and $20,000 to the winner. The second horse will receive $3,000 and the third horse $2,000.

Filipino Independence Is Inevitable

IT seems to me that the highest act open to constructive statesmanship in America today is to conceive and formulate a wise Philippine policy—a policy which shall be true to the principles of our republic, accordant with the facts of the situation, definitive and permanent in its character and therefore fitted to shape and color all legislation requisite.

THE DAY OF IGNORANT AND ENTHUSIASTIC RANTING ON THE ONE HAND AND ON THE OTHER OF INERTIA AND DRIFT, OF UNCERTAIN COURSES, OF TEMPORARY EXPEDIENTS, HAS GONE BY. THE TIME APPROACHES TO SET OUR PHILIPPINE COMPASS BY THE FIXED STARS.

I take as my starting point the motives and objects with which we went into the Philippines. They were impressively voiced by President McKinley, and he set them forth to me three years ago. OUR PURPOSE WAS NOT SELFISH, IT WAS HUMANITARIAN; IT WAS NOT THE VANITY OF SELF AGGRANDIZEMENT, IT WAS NOT THE GREED OF POWER AND DOMINION, BUT ALTRUISM CARING FOR THE HAPPINESS OF OTHERS, PHILANTHROPY RELIEVING THE FILIPINOS OF OPPRESSION AND CONFERRING ON THEM THE BLESSINGS OF LIBERTY. I am, of course, aware that other and less worthy aims appealed to individual Americans and to groups of Americans. Yet it was the humanitarian object of liberating the Filipinos from Spanish tyranny and bestowing upon them the boon of freedom that decided the president and people of the United States to compel Spain to cede to us her sovereignty over the Philippine Islands. IF OUR PRESENCE IN THE PHILIPPINES BE NOT JUSTIFIED IN ITS PURPOSE AND INTENT, THEN OUR SOLDIERS' BLOOD IS ON OUR HANDS—AYE, AND ALL THE BLOOD, IN THAT CASE INNOCENT, OF THE FILIPINOS WE HAVE FOUGHT, the misery we have caused their families and the devastation we have wrought in their homes. But I assert that to confer a blessing was the final cause of our acceptance from Spain of sovereignty over the Philippines. Nothing has happened since to alter our purpose. On this fundamental point President Roosevelt, who is not less explicit than President McKinley, has said: "We hope to do for them what has never before been done for any people of the tropics—to make them fit for self government after the fashion of the really free nations."

What does this mean but that the Filipinos are to be taught to govern themselves as Americans or Englishmen govern themselves? And is it necessary to observe that progressive liberty must from the nature of the case issue in sovereign independence?

AND I SAY THAT CONSUMMATION IS INFINITELY TO BE PREFERRED TO THEIR INCORPORATION INTO THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AS A STATE OR EVEN AS A TERRITORY.

I am sure it is the policy of the American people to admit no Asiatic country to the status and privileges of a state or territory in this republic of the United States of America. THUS, IF YOU LOOK BEYOND THE PRESENT AND THE NEAR FUTURE, YOU DESCRY IN THE DIM DISTANCE AN INDEPENDENT AND SOVEREIGN PHILIPPINE REPUBLIC.

I say you will never consent to make the Philippine Islands an integral and organic part of the United States of America. The objections to the plan are insuperable, the reasons against it invincible, the hostility to it ingrained and ineradicable. Very well, what then? A colony, a dependency? For a time this status may suffice; as a permanent arrangement it is impossible. The Filipinos have condensed the experience of centuries into these last half dozen years. They have dreamed of liberty, they have fought for liberty, they have seen in the east the star of independence.

The American people have always sympathized with "the aspirations of nationalities after freedom and independence." And when representative institutions have been conferred upon the Filipinos, if the people, through their regularly constituted spokesmen—which Luna, Malvar and Lukban never were—petition for freedom and independence and show that they are capable of maintaining law and order and discharging their international obligations, can it be doubted that the American people would grant such a petition?

THE MISTAKE OF AGUINALDO AND THE INSURGENTS (SO FAR AS THEY WERE NOT MERE BRIGANDS AND ROBBERS) WAS IN APPROACHING THE UNITED STATES WITH RIFLES INSTEAD OF PETITIONS.

From the American point of view Philippine independence is inevitable, and from the American point of view Philippine independence is a consummation devoutly to be wished.

ANY DECENT KIND OF GOVERNMENT OF THE FILIPINOS BY THE FILIPINOS IS BETTER THAN THE BEST POSSIBLE GOVERNMENT OF FILIPINOS BY AMERICANS.

For that reason I am anxious to see congress grant the Filipinos representative institutions at once. With such powers, ideas and sentiments as they have, get them in harness quickly, and let them tug and sweat under the burden of national affairs. This is the way men are trained in government. If the Filipinos are to learn to govern themselves, the sooner they get at it the better.

In 1899 I did not venture to make the period of waiting shorter than one generation owing to the lack of homogeneity, union and intercourse among the diverse peoples of these islands and the want of experience by the natives in government during three centuries of Spanish dominion. This consciousness of nationality, however, is today so manifest and powerful that General Chaffee is reported to have declared that the natives of these islands are all traitors to American sovereignty, all have their hearts set on independence. Then we have the testimony of Governor Taft that the native officials have proved reasonably capable in the administration of public affairs. The United States is the last people in the world to reason any other people into political subjection. And against a whole nation aspiring and struggling to be independent it is as impossible today to draw up an indictment as it was when Burke repudiated the task in connection with the people of the thirteen American colonies.

NATURE'S ICEHOUSE.

Food For Birds That Is Preserved In the Arctic Regions.

The number of birds that go to the arctic regions to breed is vast beyond conception. They go not by thousands, but by tens and hundreds of thousands, and because nowhere else in the world does nature provide at the same time and in the same place such a lavish prodigality of food.

The vegetation consists of cranberry, cloudberry and crowberry bushes, and these, forced by the perpetual sunshine of the arctic summer, bear enormous crops of fruit. But the crop is not ripe until the middle and end of the arctic summer, and if the fruit eating birds had to wait until it was ripe they would starve in the meantime, so they arrive on the very day of the melting of the snow.

But each year the snow descends on an immense crop of ripe fruit before the birds have time to gather it. It is thus preserved perfectly fresh and pure, and the melting of the snow discloses the bushes, with the unconsumed last year's crop hanging on them or lying, ready to be eaten, on the ground.

The frozen meal stretches across the breadth of northern Asia. It never decays and is accessible the moment the snow melts. The same heat which thaws the fruit brings into being the most prolific insect life in the world—the mosquito swarms on the tundra. No European can live there without a veil after the snow melts. The gun barrels are black with them, and clouds of them often obscure the sight.

Thus the insect eating birds have only to open their mouths to fill them with mosquitoes, and thus the presence of swarms of cliff chaffs, pipis and the wagtails in this arctic region is accounted for.—Pearson's.

Human Traits In Birds.

The human traits in birds are many, as most sympathetic naturalists have testified. Mr. Burroughs has told us that there are jealousies and rivalries among the little winged folk and that the peace of families is often disturbed by outside flirts and lady killers. Quoting this statement in The Dial, another observer gives us to understand that the errant bird husband is duly punished. "I have myself," he says, "seen an English hen sparrow holding a cock by the topknot and dangle him clear off his feet, while her friends punished him with violent peckings."

UNCLE SAM IN THE KING ROW

Why We Send Special Representatives to Royal Functions In England and Spain

THE United States will figure prominently at two of the courts of Europe during the coming spring and summer, for, besides the special embassy to the court of St. James to represent this government at the coronation of King Edward, President Roosevelt has appointed a special envoy to be present and take part in the ceremonies attendant on the coming of age of the king of Spain and his ascension to the throne.

to attend the crowning of King Edward is in response to an invitation from the court of St. James. When the date of the coronation was decided upon, King Edward and his ministers addressed invitations to the great powers to take part in the ceremony by means of representatives of their respective executives.

Minor powers received no such invitations except in cases where their rulers are personally related to the reigning house of Great Britain. For instance, neither the kingdom of Servia nor the Swiss republic was invited to send representatives.

It is worthy of note, as an evidence that the United States has grown to be considered a great power, to state that no invitation to take part in the coronation of Queen Victoria was addressed to this country, while for the coronation of her son Uncle Sam was one of the first to receive an intimation from the king that his presence by special representative was desired. The French republic has received a similar invitation, but the court of St. James has paid no such compliment to Mexico or any of the South American republics.

The special embassadors of both the United States and France will receive the same honors and distinctions as royal and imperial representatives of the monarchical governments. Royal carriages and servants will be placed at their disposal during their stay in London, while military, naval and court officers will be designated to remain in attendance upon them as gentlemen in waiting, precisely as if they were royal personages.

Whitelaw Reid will be the embassador extraordinary from the United States, and some French general or admiral of eminence, probably General the Marquis de Gallifet, formerly minister of war and an old friend of King Edward, will represent France.

When Whitelaw Reid went over to England as special embassador at the time of Queen Victoria's jubilee in 1897, exceptional honors were lavished by the late queen on our representative.

As special embassadors outrank the regular incumbents, Mr. Reid during the term of his special mission will take precedence of Joseph Choate in all official and social functions. The special embassador will enjoy the same prerogatives and diplomatic immunities as the resident embassador, and he and his staff will be accorded extraterritorial status and complete immunity from British jurisdiction.

It is perhaps unnecessary to state that the special mission from the United States or any other power represented at the coronation will not render that homage to the king which is demanded from his own subjects. Bending the knee or kissing the hand would be decidedly out of place on the part of foreigners. The tokens of respect paid by Mr. Reid and his staff will be the same as foreign embassadors at Washington accord to the president of the United States.

In the matter of dress the most democratic simplicity maintains in the case of the American embassador. He is not expected to appear in uniform or even in what is designated "frock dress," which is black knee breeches, black silk stockings and pumps. He will appear at all the ceremonies, whether held by day or night, in plain evening dress, as he did during the queen's jubilee.

Special Embassador Whitelaw Reid will be accompanied on his special mission by General James H. Wilson as representative of the United States army, and Captain Charles E. Clark will act in the same capacity for the navy. Besides, there will be three secretaries—J. P. Morgan, Jr.; Edmund Lincoln Baylies, and William S. K. Wetmore.

Whitelaw Reid, head of the special embassy, has had a wide experience in matters of this kind. He represented this country at Queen Victoria's jubilee in 1897 and was a member of the peace commission in Paris the following year. He also served as minister to France during the administration of President Harrison. He was born in Ohio sixty-five years ago and for thirty years has been editor and chief owner of the New York Tribune.

General James Harrison Wilson is a native of Illinois, although he now hails from Delaware. He is the same age as Mr. Reid. His first active service in the field occurred during the civil war as an officer of engineers and he was rapidly promoted. For gallant and meritorious services he was brevetted a major general in 1866.

On the breaking out of the Spanish war, after having been out of the service for many years, he again took up arms and as major general of volunteers commanded the First division of the First army corps. His record as a soldier has been brilliant.

Captain Charles Edgar Clark, who represents the navy, is still fresh in the public mind. He it was who brought the battleship Oregon around Cape Horn from San Francisco, a run of 14,000 miles, arriving at Florida in good condition. This feat has no parallel in naval annals. At Santiago it was Captain Clark's ship that, with the Brooklyn, bore the brunt of battle. It is in recognition of his splendid services that he is sent to the coronation. Captain Clark was born in Vermont in 1843.

Of the secretaries of the special embassy J. P. Morgan, Jr., is the son of the famous financier and is the London representative of J. P. Morgan & Co. He was born in New York and was graduated from Harvard in 1889.

Edmund Lincoln Baylies is a member of a New York law firm. He is forty-three years old. He also is a Harvard graduate.

William S. K. Wetmore is the son of Senator Wetmore of Rhode Island. He is between twenty-eight and thirty years of age and is secretary of the Hongkong and Shanghai bank in New York. Mr. Wetmore is well known in New York society and is one of the twenty-four young men whom Mrs. Astor honored by putting him on her list of the new One Hundred at a ball recently given by her.

Dr. Jabez L. M. Curry, who has been appointed special envoy to Spain to represent the president at the coming of age of King Alfonso XIII., was born in Georgia nearly seventy-seven years ago. He is now president of the Southern Baptist board of foreign missions. He is an ordained minister of the Baptist church.

As United States minister to Spain he was present when the infant king was presented to the assembled ministers on a silver salver, as is the custom in Spain on the birth of the heir to the throne.

WITH AX AND BLOCK.

Criminal Executions In Prussia Still Performed by the Hangman.

Seventeenth century methods still prevail in Prussia in the matter of the execution of criminals. The man sentenced there to suffer capital punishment is led to the fatal block, and his head is chopped off with identically the same sort of ax as that which was used to put a period to the career of Charles I. in the Tower of London on that fateful 30th of January 252 years ago. Practically the only difference between the twentieth century execution and that of the time of Cromwell is that the condemned is not put to death publicly.

In many parts of the German empire the guillotine has taken the place of the gallows and the block, but in Prussia old fashioned justice clings tenaciously to the old fashions, and not the rope nor the automatic knife nor the power of electricity has been able to displace the broadax as the law's official implement of death. The only concession made to modern sentiment is in the garb of the executioner.

This functionary does not, as in the earlier times, dress in doublet and hose and hide his ensanguined identity behind a frightsome mask. Instead, he appears at the execution garbed in a frock coat of somber hue and correct cut, and he wears upon his head, even when delivering the death stroke, a tall silk hat. His three assistants are similarly attired.

Why this garb was chosen no one can say authoritatively. It is one of those things the origin of which appears to have been forgotten with the originators. But it is the lawful costume, prescribed in the regulations, which apply also to the twelve civilian witnesses who must attend an execution, with the result that a stranger witness is unable to say until the ax has fallen which of the other fifteen silk hatted, frock coated individuals grouped about him is the man who lives by death.—New York Press.

FLOWER AND TREE.

Keep begonias where the air is not too dry, and they will not drop their leaves.

A tree is nearly dormant in winter, especially one that has been lately transplanted.

Plants in a dormant state require very little water during the winter, and an excess will cause decay.

Drenching rosebushes with strong quassia tea is a good curative of bugs and other destructive insects and pests.

To root cuttings quickly fill a saucer full of sand, into which the slips may be set. Keep the sand the consistency of mud.

Never give up a decaying rosebush until you have tried watering it two or three times a week with soot tea for a short time.

To prevent crotched trees from splitting after they come into bearing twist and fasten two small limbs together, and as the stem grows it will prevent splitting.

Cuttings of quick growing herbaceous plants, like heliotrope, verbena, phlox, geraniums, root quickly, chrysanthemums quickest of all. Choose cuttings when the plants are most vigorous.

Perhaps.

Mr. Clubman—I see by the papers that a poor young man who lost both his legs while saving the life of a beautiful heiress at a railway crossing is to marry the girl. She dismissed all suitors and offered herself to him.
